

Local Women Elected To Republican Offices

The seven delegates from Jackson County chapter, Oregon Federation of Women's Republican clubs, who attended the annual convention held last Thursday at the Village Green, Cottage Grove, retained two federation offices and sponsored an important amendment to the by-laws.

Mrs. Lester Adams, Applegate, was elected first vice president, replacing Mrs. E. A. Littrell, Medford and Mrs. Gene Williams, Medford, retained her position as trustee for the Fourth Congressional district. Mrs. Williams is president of the Jackson County club.

The amendment will reorganize voting procedures to insure fair representation from all local groups, it is reported. Attending the convention, in addition to Mrs. Littrell and Mrs. Williams, were Mrs. John Lynch, Mrs. Stephen G. Nye, Mrs. George Hammond, Mrs. William J. Miller and Mrs. Rosemary Stratton Young.

A total of 285 women, representing 33 local chapters of the federation, attended the convocation. Local activities were reported and political policies of Republican women for the next two years were outlined, in addition to the election of officers.

Mrs. Littrell was toastmistress for the luncheon and accepted plaquards on behalf of the Jackson County club for the table decorations and programs which received special recognition. Mrs. Nye, former legislator from the Fourth Congressional district, received a hearty round of applause when introduced as a special guest during the luncheon. Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Young took part in a satirical skit, written by Mrs. James D. Tomlin, president of the Lake Oswego club, depicting the history of the 25-year-old National Federation and the personalities of former presidents.

Mrs. Paul Daughtrey, Salem, was elected president of the Oregon federation. Other officers elected were Mrs. James Tomlin, treasurer; Mrs. John Carlich, First District trustee; Mrs. Louis O'Donnell, Third District trustee.

The convention also voted a change in the annual meeting time from spring to November; conventions will be held biennially and because of the change, those elected last week will serve for two and one-half years.

Speaker at the luncheon was Richard G. Christensen, young minister and unsuccessful contender for the office of senator in Seattle, Wash., during the last election. Mr. Christensen asked Republican women to take a "positive approach" to republicanism, rather than trying to follow a defensive line against the Democrats.

He urged the group to preserve the constitution as the basic laws from which Republicans must rebuild their party; to concentrate on freedom of the individual rather than Potpourri expects to get a lot of sympathy because of what we're going to write. We feel that an explanation is due certain friends and groups for certain stories unwritten and this is it—we've got bursitis. And if that isn't enough to bring on a lot of sympathy, we give up. From time to time we've heard victims of this nasty disorder telling how they suffered and we always thought privately that they must be exaggerating a bit. It couldn't be that bad. But now that bursitis has settled in our left shoulder and arm, we're willing to admit that the results are pretty horrible.

Not only is the pain excruciating, but it seems to tie the arm to the side. It refuses to do what a normal arm should do. We can't reach over or up and grasp objects—we're practically a one-handed person. Pappy has had to take over cooking and cleaning duties at home and has helped with buttons and hooks and eyes on clothing but one chore he positively refused to attempt—that is to help with the hair combing.

The front hair Potpourri can manage with the right hand, but when it comes to doing the twist in back—that is something else. Saturday morning we managed by hanging our head down until the painful left arm could reach our head, and Sunday morning we raised our left arm up as far as it would go, grasped the elbow with the right hand and forced the left arm up to where we could hang on to the twist of hair while the right was used for pinning. The resulting coiffure wasn't spectacular, but it was done after a fashion. We had to rest for several minutes afterwards.

There is one problem we haven't solved—how does a one-handed woman get herself into a tight two-way stretch girdle?

This ghastly bursitis kept us from our planned schedule and Saturday night we were sitting at home under the heat lamp instead of attending the installation of officers of Zuleima temple, daughters of the Nile, as we had planned to do. The Daughters stage these ceremonies in exotic and colorful settings, and we had looked forward to seeing the new queen, Mrs. Murray Gardiner, in her gown designed and made especially for the occasion. We'll have to set up a special appointment to see the gown.

Last Monday, being in normal health, we were happy to drive to Mon Desir at noon for a Hawaiian party which Julie Tummers gave for about 65 friends from several southern Oregon towns and cities. Mrs. Tummers recently spent a vacation in Hawaii, and brought back some new recipes and party ideas which she wanted to share.

Julie served the meal from a buffet table which brought exclamations, both for the food and the decorations. The centerpiece was anthurium blossoms sent from Hawaii by the John Jardines; it was in their home that Mrs. Tummers was a guest when she visited the islands. They also sent dozens of little Vanda orchids in order that each guest might have one. Mrs. L. C. Gordon, Central Point, arranged the flowers.

Mrs. Tummers and the two friends who assisted her, Mrs. John Mansfield and Mrs. H. A. Stanley, wore muumuu. These island garments, which originally were completely shapeless and without fit, are gradually being transformed. The lavender and purple one Mrs. T. wore Monday was fitted somewhat and had deep inverted pleats at the bottom of the skirt on the sides, and these were of contrasting plain lavender material. The new muumuu are advertised in the islands as having the "broad" look.

When Mrs. Alfred S. V. Carpenter arrived at the luncheon she brought her hostess a lovely lei of fresh plumeria blossoms. The Carpenters had returned home on the night before after an island vacation.

At luncheon time, Julie urged her guests to "try everything" and we did. Most of the dishes were adaptations of island recipes—Mrs. Tummers says "it's just about impossible for me to follow a recipe exactly." Her "sweet potato kookai" was flavored with pineapple, orange juice, butter and chopped walnuts. Julie said she tasted it, thought it a bit flat so she poured in a little rum.

One of the main dishes was a combination of shrimp, crab and rock cod in a sauce which contained cream of mushroom soup, leeks, parsley, clams, tomatoes and curry. A quantity of white wine added a fillip. A bowl of melon balls and other fruit was encircled with little orchids. Condiments included mango chutney and guava preserves which the hosts made in Hawaii and brought home.

Among the hors d'oeuvre type foods were abalone puppuss—the hostess bought the plain canned abalone and then spiced it. Guests were intrigued with "pineapples" made from liverwurst plastered around a jar. Mrs. T. softened the liverwurst with mayonnaise, added a bit more seasoning and then covered the outside of the jar; she scored it with a knife tip to resemble the fresh pineapple surface, and decorated the whole with slices of green olive stuffed with pimiento. The jars held leaves which looked like the pineapple tops.

Gelatin dishes of new flavors were also on the menu. Julie used a gelatin base made in Japan and flavored one with peach juice and brandy, and the other with a combination of cherry and pineapple. This she didn't think was completely successful, since it failed to harden to the proper consistency.

Julie's version of curried rice with diced ham, and plain rice for those who don't like curry, were both on the menu. The table decorations included coconut shells filled with macadamia nuts brought from the islands. Table bouquets were of pink camellias from Mrs. Stanley's garden and Mrs. Stanley, who has lived abroad in past years, loaned carved articles and hangings for wall decorations.

During the afternoon we learned something new—the cost and quantity of hair spray young girls use are causing minor crises in some families. One mother reported that she and her husband had had a family pow wow and laid down the law to their two daughters—each may have not more than one large can of hair spray per month. Both girls had been using about a large can a week and since these may run as high as a dollar or two, the parents finally decided this was one expense they must cut from the budget.

Let's see—if each can cost $1.50 and each girl used two, that's $3 a week, or roughly $150 a year. This sum, we might point out, is more than what entire families earn in a year in some countries of this world. O.S.

Girl Scouts Participate In Newly Formed Program

Girl Scouts and Brownies of the Rogue Valley council now are participating in the new Scout program recently instituted.

Brownies now are in the 7 and 8 year age groups and the girls are following the "B" programs—Be discoverers, Be ready helpers and Be friend-makers. Their activities are geared for those in the second and third grades.

Junior Girl Scouts are ages 9 through 11, and they now may earn proficiency badges, Sign of the Arrow, and the Sign of the Star.

Cadette Girl Scouts range from 12 through 14 years and they also earn proficiency badges but will be challenged citizenship, emergency pre-social dependability, active parenthood and living by the Girl Scout promise. This program is for the seventh through ninth grade students and will climax with a first class rank.

Senior Scouts are girls from 15 through 17 years with the program for those in the tenth, eleventh and twelfth grades. Major interests are the arts, community action, homemaking, international friendship, mariner Scouting, mounted Scouting, trailblazers and wing Scouting.

The troops can be as large as 24 to 32 members, broken into patrols of six and eight members. One or two advisers are needed for each senior troop. The program is designed to allow troops with varying interests to merge without loss of the major interest identity of smaller troops.

Senior opportunities and scholarships are brought out in national, regional and international activities that senior Scouts can qualify to attend.

Under council sponsorship are the opportunities for leader-in-training and councilor-in-training programs and camping.

Service and prestige in the community are programs of aid among handicapped persons, and in animal care, aquatic safety, child care, hospital, international, laboratory, library, merchandising, museum, office, program, public relations, and others.

Hold Fun Day

Fourth grade Brownie Troop 36 of Washington school held a fun day at the Girl Scout Center for second grade Brownie troop 62 and third grade Brownie troop 123, on Thursday, March 21. Rene Foulton and Marie Stratford did a baton routine.

Refreshments were served by Troop 36. The program closed with the friendship circle and singing taps.

After the meeting Troop 36 visited the United States National Bank where Francis Wiser, assistant manager, took them on a tour.

Troop 36 has been busy during the last month, holding a potluck dinner on March 13, and a snow party on March 19; also they recently took a tour of Gilman's dairy.

A potluck dinner was held at the Girl Scout center for Girl Scout week.

Mr. Paulsen showed slides of the Seattle World's Fair, along with a few of the East-West Shrine Game's half time performance at San Francisco. Slides of Camp Low Echo were also shown. Mrs. Stratford informed the parents about the program change and of some of the opportunities that are available to the girls as Junior Girl Scouts. A skit was presented by the Senorita Patrol.

Troop members are Rhonda Breedlove, Dawn Paulsen, Sharon Pace, Rene Foulton, Kathy Patch, Gayle and Shirley Pearson, Kathy Riecke, Carol Pennington, Barbara Ruth, Cindy Smelser, Marie Stratford, Angela Stallworth and Susan Stalcup.

Brownies have attended every Brownie Skate held at the Jackson County Rollarena.

On March 19, Mr. and Mrs. Stratford took the girls on a snow party at the Green Springs summit. The girls went tobogganing and for a hike in the snow, with Mrs. Stratford identifying animals and bird tracks.

On the field trip to Gilman's dairy, Mrs. Stalcup helped the Stratfords provide transportation. Mrs. Riecke took them on a tour of the facilities.

Civic Music Membership Campaign Under Way

Medford is utopia in short pants, Dr. Arthur Kreisman, Southern Oregon college professor, told a group of workers of the Jackson County Civic Music association at a luncheon Saturday at the Rogue Valley Country club.

Each one of us wants to make the valley as good as we can, the speaker continued, and called the present Civic Music membership drive a missionary effort. He explained that each person has a selfish reason for selling memberships to their neighbors so they can enjoy the best in musical entertainment.

But, he added, ultimately you do them a favor, as the concert's enrich the life of the community, and the community becomes known for its music.

Civic Music association is one place where you get a direct return on your money, he added. He concluded by challenging the workers to make "Medford a utopia—let's start lengthening the trousers."

The noon luncheon was the kick off event for the week long membership drive of the association. This is one of the few times it has been held in
