Eagle Point - The Eagle Point music instructors discussed the music curriculum for all schools prior to a recent district school board meeting.

Some of the objectives and accomplishments achieved in the high school music program were presented by instructor Charles Martin. He explained that music is used to enrich one's cultural outlook and to teach self-discipline.

Martin pointed out and explained the following objectives of the school band: musicianship-technical ability and finesse; acquaintance with good literature; teaching teamwork with the group; competition within the class; development of poise; pride of belonging to a group; and use of good practice habits.

For vocal singing, Martin noted the enjoyment of singing with a group and the stress of note reading as his first two objectives. Literature again plays an important role as does the production of tone exercise, use of proper breathing procedures, posture, pronunciation and diction of words so that they are readily understandable.

In long range planning, Martin said he hoped to have a 50 piece band with more school owned instruments. A beginning band as well as a beginning vocal group in high school is hoped for in the future.

Intensive recruitment programs for utilization of counseling and guidance and technique lessons which will include at least three lessons per month for each child as well as ensemble work are goals he is working toward.

The music instructors feel a central library for music, where no possible duplication of materials is possible, would be of benefit with one budget, one inventory and a coordination of the whole district. They also hope to include future work for string instruments with the school furnishing the larger instruments.

Keith Krambeal and Richard Gannaway pointed out the objectives and methods used in achieving the elementary band and vocal music goals. Their objective is to develop the feeling for music, the tone, articulation, tone quality, and reading around notes for better musicianship.

They noted that a youngster soon realizes that it takes cooperation of every member to have good results. A spirit of competition is kept alive by challenges for positions in the band. This also promotes more home practice.

Public performances aid in the development of poise in all musicians. The student also develops the pride of belonging to a group and realize that they are representing their school. Learning to play an instrument requires a lot of practice outside of school and students are encouraged to develop a daily practice habit, they said.

The Flutophones (a plastic toy) is being used in the fourth grade as a pre-band instrument. The use of this instrument eliminates the problem of tone production while it teaches reading of music and basic fingering. It also has a value in interesting youngsters in future band work.

Fire District Eyes Admission To Mutual Aid

Talent - Steps to include the recently formed Talent Rural Fire Protection district in the mutual aid association will be taken in the near future, the district board determined at a meeting here last night.

Ralph Conner, fire chief, outlined the procedure necessary in order to make mutual aid agreements with neighboring fire departments. A form would have to be sent to each department involved, Conner said he had been informed while attending a fire chiefs meeting in Central Point last week.

Conner was subsequently directed to take the necessary steps to join to mutual aid association. Under the mutual aid program, other fire departments would come to the aid of the Talent firemen in an emergency and vice versa.

The board called a special meeting for next Tuesday evening, at which time a representative of the firm supplying fire fighting equipment to the new district is expected to be present.

Her slight drawl and occasional "you-all" are of special delight to her students. She was born and raised in Jacksonville, Florida.

Honors are nothing new to her. She graduated from Robert E. Lee high school ninth in her class of 400. While in high school she was in many school activities, including being an officer of the National Honor society and a member of Quill and Scroll, an international honor society for high school journalism.

Also a Secretary in addition to her abilities at school, Miss Richmire is an experienced secretary, having held three responsible executive secretarial positions to help finance a college education. The planning of Capital Manor, which will be completed about July 1, 1963, is an object lesson in thorough research. The object of the planning was to determine what is needed for the comfort, safety and well-being of the men and women who will make their homes here.

Medical care is important, and this will be provided by a physician making calls at Capital Manor on a regular schedule. Consultation on these days will be available without charge. Supplementing this service is a 20-bed infirmary, with a qualified nurse in constant attendance.

Other small but important details have received consideration, too. These include dietetically correct meal planning, waist height electrical outlets, wall-to-wall carpeting (no waxed floor surfaces), non-glare lighting, and safety grab bars in the bathroom, to name only a few.

An informative booklet contains pertinent information about this new retirement residence. This will be sent to you upon request, without obligation, of course. May we send one to you?
