Differences Voiced Over Judicial Article

Salem – (UPI) – The dean of the University of Oregon law school differed with the State Bar here Tuesday on two key sections of the judicial article of a proposed new constitution.

One of the sections would give the State Supreme Court the power to make the rules of procedure for the state court system, subject to legislative review.

The other would have state court judges appointed by the governor. After two years, and then every six years, a judge would "run on his record," giving voters a chance to remove him if they wanted.

The State Bar is unhappy with both articles.

Walter Evans Testifies

Walter M. Evans Jr., of the bar's Committee on Constitutional Revision testified befor the House and Senate Committees on Constitutional Revision.

He said if the Supreme Court is given rule - making power, instead of the legislature as at present, attorneys fear a "blanket" adoption of federal court rules.

And he said it is more feasible to campaign against a bad judge by putting up an opponent, than by trying to vote the office vacant.

Law Dean Orlando J. Hollis disagreed. He called the rule - making power "fairly conservative," since it requires a waiting period and gives the legislature veto power over any rules.

He also liked the appointment, instead of election, of judges, modified by subsequent voter ratification. Although Oregon now in theory elects judges, most are actually appointed to fill vacancies before ever running for elections.

Hollis said Oregon's attorneys shy away from the new, and from changes in their familiar court procedures that have grown up over the years. But Evans said this was not the reason for the bar's dislike of provisions in the article.

Bend Bulletin Publisher Robert Chandler, a member of the commission that wrote the proposed new document, reviewed the judicial section.

He said it contained "about as innocuous a grant of rule-making power that could be made."

He said the provision for appointment of judges, with subsequent voter ratification or removal, was part of the "heart" of the article.

He conceded, however, even if some changes were made by the legislature, the article still would give Oregon "better administration of justice" than at present.

Hollis and witnesses from the bar agreed a section providing "a right to trial by jury" should be made more explicit.

JUST THE TYPE

New York –(UPI)– Want to be an airline stewardess? Your chances of becoming one will be increased if you are presently employed as a secretary or stenographer, advises one large airline.

Stock List Steady; Steels Recover Portion of Losses

New York – (UPI) – Stocks held about steady today.

Utilities eased with Panhandle and Houston Lighting down large fractions to a point. Beckman and IBM rose around ½ apiece in the electronics.

Steels recovered some of Tuesday's losses brought about by the indictment of seven steel companies on charges of price fixing. Chemicals showed little change. Chrysler rose nearly a point in a mixed auto section.

Lorillard added more than a point on news it may boost its dividend if earnings continue to rise. ACF and Polaroid rose a point or more but Bristol Myers weakened.

Measure Against 'Blockbusting' In California

Sacramento-(UPI)-A bill designed to halt "blockbusting" was before the legislature today.

The measure, with solid backing of Gov. Edmund G. Brown and Atty. Gen. Stanley A. Mosk, would declare that it is contrary to "public policy" of California to discriminate in housing.

To furnish teeth for the measure, it provides that the license of any real estate broker or salesman engaged in discriminatory practices could be revoked or suspended.

The bill's co-authors, Sen. George Miller Jr. (D-Martinez) and Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh (D-Inglewood) concurred that it would have a "strong deterrent effect" against discrimination against Negroes in real estate.

Aimed at Panic-Selling

But in particular it was designed to end "blockbusting" where a salesman creates panic-selling in an all-white neighborhood by telling residents that a Negro is moving into the block and this will knock the bottom from home values.

Miller said blockbusting means the seller of property is induced to take less than the fair market value for his property while the purchaser, generally from a minority race, may be forced to pay a high price.

"But the real [illegible], in [illegible], is the [illegible] which has [illegible]," Miller said.

Obye Assumes Job As Caves Manager

Grants Pass – [illegible] C. Obye, veteran of 34 years with the forest service in Jackson and Josephine counties, has [illegible] duties as manager of the Oregon Caves resort.

Obye, who retired from the forest service here in 1960 after 15 years as Siskiyou National Forest supervisor, started his career in 1926 as a ranger at Rogue River National forest. From 1936 to 1941 he was assistant forest supervisor at Rogue River forest headquarters in Medford.

James Christianson, vice president of the Oregon Caves company which operates all facilities at the national monument, said the organization is looking forward to a season to equal that of last year, when a record number of 117,000 visitors was noted.

McNamara Orders Halt in Investigation Of Story on TFX

Washington–(UPI) – Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara today called an abrupt halt to the latest investigation into the sources of a news story concerning the TFX fighter plane controversy.

A brief Pentagon annoucement said the investigation will be concluded today. A spokesman added that no lie detector tests have been or will be given to top civilian Pentagon officials questioned in the matter.

Deputy Defense Secretary Roswell L. Gilpatric and the secretaries of the Air Force and Navy, among others, had signed statements agreeing to take such tests if they were considered necessary.

Subjected to Abuse

The inquiry, headed by Lt. Gen. W. K. Blanchard, Air Force inspector general, concerned a March 21 story in the Washington Evening Star saying that Air Force personnel had been subjected to "oral abuse" by representatives of the McClellan Senate investigating subcommittee.

The subcommittee is investigating why the contract for the TFX two-service fighter plane went to General Dynamics instead of the Boeing company, which had the backing of most top uniformed defense officials.

The Pentagon announcement said: "The Air Force anounced today that the inspector general of the Air Force intends to conclude today his current investigations of the unauthorized release of an Air Force document" which was the source of the story.

Takes Sworn Statements

Asked how the investigation was being concluded, the spokesman said the inspector general is "assembling and evaluating" the material he has collected, including sworn statements from dozens of persons who might have handled the document.

The spokesman said the investigation was undertaken because the McClellan committee was concerned about the source of the "leak." The extraordinary suggestions of lie detector tests caused reverbations throughout the Pentagon.

Through Tuesday, Blanchard's organization had questioned 60 persons in the Air Force, 41 in the office of secretary of defense, and 20 in the Navy. Some were amused. Not a few were indignant at being asked whether they were willing to be harnessed to a polygraph.

The irony of it was that the Defense Department acknowledged the leaked story had no secrecy classification. An official said today not even "real security leaks" had had such investigating.
