

Family Council

Editors Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a woman's editor, and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and considers. (Copyright 1963—General Features Corp.)

Anna D. - If he brings his parents here, I'll move out.
Waldo D. - Where's her loyalty? That's no way for a wife to talk.

Anna D. - My husband comes from Puerto Rico where I hear it's O.K. for people to live eight in a room. Well, it's not O.K. in my apartment. We only have a kitchen, bedroom and living room, but Waldo thinks the place is large enough to hold his aged parents and a brother and sister, for a two-month visit. I'm supposed to give up my bed and use a studio couch in the kitchen. Am I right to say no?

Waldo D. - Is that the right talk for a wife? My parents are old and it's a hard journey for them. They're simple people who don't expect much more than a smile and a roof over their heads. The other two are coming along to take care of them. I'll feel so happy to have them all near where I can watch over them. It's true our home is small, but we could manage if Anna wasn't so mean about this. I'd do the same thing for her parents.

The Council - As they say in American theater programs, Waldo, look around now and choose your nearest... well, not exit but hotel, motel, furnished room. Anna isn't ready to donate her home for this project, but we bet she'll chip in money - even if it's the money she's saving up for a larger apartment. That will give your folks shelter, plus plenty of smiles - Anna's as well as yours.

There can be occasional overnight stays at your home, but no major discommodation. Waldo's proposal would be feasible only in an emergency. Since alternate quarters are available, to prolong it for two months would turn an emergency into a disaster. And that's no way to treat a visit.
