"AFTER THIS MONEY, JUST SAY GOODBYE. YOU DON'T HAVE TO TELL HIM TO 'BE GOOD.'"

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor.

Mr. G.Y.—The school should teach him how to talk.

Mrs. G.Y.—He'd talk better if you didn't hound him so much.

Mr. G.Y.—Our 9-year-old son is extremely smart, but when he opens his mouth to speak you'd think he was mentally defective.

Mrs. G.Y.—I think Jackie just freezes up because he knows his father expects so much of him.

The Council: Today's treasure is the gift of gab—especially for those who have something to say.

Leaping in to finish his sentence makes things worse. His nod doesn't mean, Mr. Y., that you've read his mind.

Top High School Students Selected

Corvallis — (UPI) — Jack Hutchins of Bend and Lee Ann Mann of Hermiston Saturday were elected the outstanding Oregon high school boy and girl business students for 1963.

They were named at the close of the two-day State Future Business Leaders of America convention here.

Mike Gerkman of Oregon City was elected president of the organization. Also elected were Terry Schandel, Oregon City, vice president; Beverly Helsel, Stayton, secretary; Joan Forette, Stayton, treasurer and Bonnie Wilson, Beaverton, reporter.

Seder Ritual Opens Annual Observance

By LOUIS CASSELS UPI Correspondent

"Why is this night different from all other nights?" That question will be asked in millions of Jewish homes this evening.

Tradition decrees that it be asked by the youngest son of the family.

It is answered by the head of the family retelling the story of the Exodus—the mighty act of deliverance by which God brought the children of Israel out of bondage in Egypt.

The question and answer are part of the Seder, a home worship service which opens the annual observance of the eight-day Passover season.

The Seder is probably the oldest continually observed religious ritual in the world. It has been celebrated for more than 3,000 years.

Use Special Dishes

The Seder table is spread before dark, with the finest linens and best silver that the home can provide.

At sundown, the mother lights candles on the table, and all members of the family gather around.

"Praised art Thou, O Lord our God, ruler of the universe, who hast chosen us from all people and singled us out from among men . . . for Thy service."

Altogether, four glasses of wine are drunk during the meal. They recall God's four promises to Moses that the Israelites would be freed from captivity.

Other ingredients of the Seder feast include: —Matzo, or unleavened bread, which is a reminder that the Israelites had to flee Egypt so hastily that they had no time to bake regular bread.

—Bitter herbs (usually a piece of horse radish) to recall the bitterness of a slave's life in Egypt.

—Charoses, a mixture of apples, nuts, cinnamon and wine, which symbolizes the mortar which the Jews used to make bricks for the pharaoh during their days of captivity.

The order of the service, including prayers and thanksgivings used at various stages of the meal, is laid out in a book called the Haggadah.

"In every generation," says one passage, "each Jew should regard himself as though he too were brought out of Egypt. Not our fathers alone, but we also, did the Holy One redeem; for not alone in Egypt but in many other lands, have we groaned under the burden of affliction and suffered as victims of malice, ignorance and fanaticism."

Another sense in which the Passover has a personal, here-and-now significance for religious Jews was cited in a holiday statement by Emil H. Baar, chairman of the board of trustees of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

In annually recalling the story of the Exodus, he said, "the Jew continuously reaffirms his belief that God is not indifferent or insensitive to his world and his people. It is essentially a message of hope. What happens to us in this world is not a cycle of events ending in a cypher. Man is not an expendable cog in a cosmic machine. Man is a meaningful, sacred entity."

Holifield Objects To Cost of Program

Washington — (UPI) — Rep. Chet Holifield (D-Calif.) said Sunday funds for the $20 billion man-on-the-moon program could be better spent for more schools, homes and hospitals.

The prestige value of putting a man on the moon is not worth the cost, he said.

Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, chairman of the Aeronautical and Space Sciences Committee, disagreed.

Anderson said even if there were no moon program, Congress would not divert the funds to raising the nation's standard of living.

Cuban Exiles Urged To 'Have Confidence'

Miami — (UPI) — The State Department's Cuban affairs chief urged Cuban exiles Sunday to "have confidence" in United States policies against Fidel Castro.

"There is no quick, easy solution to the Cuban problem," John H. Crimmins said. He said the new administration policy against anti-Castro sea raids reflects no change in final goals.
