Rowan Selected As Semi-Finalist In AFS Program

James Rowan, a junior in Medford High school, has been chosen semi-finalist for the high school in the American Field Service program, according to the New York headquarters of the American Field Service.

It will be May before it is known whether Rowan will participate in the exchange program.

Semi-finalists are matched with participating families in the various countries, notified, and when suitable families are found available the semi-finalists become finalists in the program.

If American Field Service exhausts the number of available homes before one is found for Rowan, Medford will not have a finalist this year, according to Mrs. R. E. Mencke of the local committee.

Last year, Garner Haupter was the Medford finalist in the AFS program. He spent the summer in Norway under the AFS summer exchange program. Rowan's program also will be a summer one, if he is accepted. This means he would leave in early June and return in September.

Rowan played one of the leads in the choir musical, "Bye, Bye Birdie," this year. He also is a member of Madrigal, a select group of choir members. His other activities at high school are tennis, ski club, History, Economics and Civics association and debate team.

Businessmen Must Turn Eyes Abroad, Rotarians Are Told

"American businessmen must turn their eyes abroad and put on their selling clothes if they wish to take advantage of great opportunities in world trade in the immediate years ahead," according to Lloyd Porter, chief of the Foreign Trade Section of the U. S. Department of Commerce in Portland.

He spoke at a luncheon address here Tuesday before the Medford Rotary club.

The program was held at the Rogue Valley Country club in conjunction with the third annual Southern Oregon Management Seminar.

He was introduced by Dean Richard W. Lindholm of the University of Oregon's school of business administration.

Official and members of the Medford Chamber of Commerce, who joined with Medford Rotarians for the meeting, heard Porter describe the economic impact of foreign trade and the need of small business as well as large to enter competitive markets overseas opened by common market expansion.

Can Help Others - American business can help free world countries improve their standard of living, Porter said, and in doing so open new avenues of profit. In America 95 persons out of every 100 own radios while in common market countries the number is 23; in automobiles the ratio is 23 to 7, in television sets, 29 to 4 and in refrigerators 28 to 6.

Porter outlined some of the U. S. Department of Commerce steps in an aggressive campaign to expand present foreign markets for U. S. goods and to create new ones.

Economic studies are available to small as well as large business firms, new trade centers are being encouraged, trade missions to afford face-to-face approaches to overseas trade, and comprehensive market analysis, selling and finance advice and assistance were outlined.

Opportunities in Field - Great opportunities are opening in this field, the Department of Commerce official emphasized.

His department, he said, would be glad to secure detail surveys of market potential and would advise in securing the services of competent export agents and custom house brokers. In 1962, 6,500 inquiries from foreign firms eager to trade here were processed.

A world trade conference will be a part of the District 511 Rotary International assembly and conference at Springfield and Eugene on April 21, 22, 23 and 24.
