Attitude on Christ's Death Baffling To Non-Christians

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Correspondent

To non-Christians, the most baffling aspect of the Christian faith is its attitude toward the death of Jesus Christ.

One might reasonably expect Christians to recall with shame and mourning the fact that the founder of their church was executed as a common criminal.

Instead, they commemorate the anniversary of His crucifixion every year. And do they call its "Black Friday?" No, they call it "Good Friday."

Year-round, they flaunt from their altars golden replicas of the gibbet on which Jesus met His agonizing and ignominus death. Their chief service of worship is built around symbols of His broken body and spilled blood. And they call it "Black Friday?" Eucharist—or "thanksgiving."

Glory in Cross

It appears that Christians actually do, as they say in one of their hymns, "glory in the cross of Christ."

Why?

The question goes to the heart of Christian faith. For it can be answered only in terms of a belief which Christians have held with great assurance since the time of the first apostles, but which they still find very difficult to define or explain.

St. Paul expressed the belief simply but profundly when he told the Corinthians:

"Christ died for our sins . . . and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world."

Use Metaphors

New Testament writers, inciuding St. Paul, use perhaps a dozen different metaphors in their attempt to describe what Christ accomplished for mankind on Calvary. They speak of His death as a sacrifice, an expiation, a propitiation, an atonement for the sins of men. They depict Christ as standing in man's stead, accepting the punishment which man deserves for his willful wrongdoing. They speak of men as being saved, ransomed, redeemed, or delivered from his just fate because of Christ's intervention on his behalf.

In attempting to capture a great mystery within the dry language of dogma, theologians have sometimes made it sound as though God were same kind of vengeful ogre who had to be appeased by a sacrifical offering of innocent blood.

This is exactly the opposite of the Bible's teaching, which points to the cross of Christ as the ultimate proof and supreme deconstration of God's forgiving love for all of his human creatures.

God Himself Acts

How can this be? The teaching makes sense only if it was God Himself who was acting in and through Christ. And this, of course, is precisely what Christians believe. As usual, St. Paul put it more succintly than anyone else has managed to do:

"God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself."

God could not ignore man's sins, or treat them as unimportant. To do so would have demeaned both God and man, and would have made a mockery of the moral law. True forgiveness is never a cheap and easy thing: It is always costly to someone, either the one who forgives or the one who is forgiven.

What God said to men in the enacted parable of Calvary was: Your sins are real and ugly, and have estranged you from me. But I love you in spite of your hard hearts and selfish ways. I will pay the price of your folly. I will do the suffering which must be done if there is to be a genuine reconciliation.

And what is required of man? Only that he respond to the reconciling act in humility and gratitude, and open his own heart to his fellow man.

"In this is love, not that we loved God but that He loved us and sent His son to be the expiation for our sins," says the First Letter of John.

"Beloved, if God so loved us, we also ought to love one another."

FLOWER CROSS—The annual Flowering of the Cross service for children of St. Mark's Episcopal church on Easter will be held Sunday at 4 p.m. This is the cross as it appeared last year after the flowers had been placed on it. The cross is placed outside the church entrance after the service and may be viewed by passers-by. (Knackstedt photo)
