

Ullman's Attention Centers on Bills For Eastern Oregon

Editor's note: This is the first in a series on legislation sponsored by Oregon's congressional delegation.

Washington (Special) - Rep. Al Ullman has introduced mostly meat and potatoes bills, of concern to his eastern Oregon district, during this session of Congress. On major national legislation, he has limited himself to a community colleges bill, a youth conservation corps bill and a medicare for the aged bill, all similar to Administration legislation. They are also issues on which he feels strongly.

Ullman believes it's useless to grind out bills on major subjects which go nowhere, since the committees consider Administration bills, which they proceed to modify. Ullman's output is as follows:

HR 1710. Potato processors within a market agreement area are now exempted from the requirement to purchase potatoes of a certain high quality. Under Ullman's amendment to the Marketing Agreement Act, they would no longer be able to buy low grade potatoes. This has had a depressing effect on potato prices.

HR 1714 allows disputes over grazing lands to be settled in local courts rather than in the District of Columbia courts.

Freed From Liability
HR 1713 allows holders of certain land to be freed from financial liability to pay off construction charges on work on an obsolete Klamath Indian reclamation project undertaken years ago by the Indian Bureau.

HR 1712 would authorize construction of additional irrigation facilities on the Crooked River Reclamation project near Prineville, Ore.

HR 4071 would give the Pacific Northwest first preference on the use of Columbia river power in the event that some of it is exported to nearby areas.

Ullman said that because of certain "personality conflicts" within the Interior appropriations subcommittee, of which crusty Rep. Mike Kirman (D-Ohio) is chairman, he has been working hard to assure that funds for the Vale Project were included this year. He was successful. This is a grazing rehabilitation effort in Malheur county and required money this year to get it into operation.

Kirwan had threatened to cut off Oregon appropriations because of a run-in he had with Sen. Wayne Morse and Rep. Edith Green last year over appropriations for a $10 million aquarium in the Nation's Capital which they scorned because of pressing social needs in the city.

As a member of the Ways and Means committee, which considers major revenue legislation, such as the President's tax bill, medicare, social security, unemployment compensation, etc., Ullman has become concerned that the public has a false picture of the federal budget that results in misunderstanding of government spending.

He has introduced HR 1711 to change the government bookkeeping system by making a distinction between operating expenditures such as money for power dams, foreign credit, timber management and reclamation. These are made to look like pure spending items in the current budget.

Action Deplored
Ullman thinks a public community colleges bill might be the answer to the present deadlock over federal aid to education, and he deplored the action of the Oregon board of higher education in cutting back on junior colleges.

Ullman has spent up to six hours a day in committee sessions on the tax bill. Hearings were completed last month and it is expected to take at least another month to write a tax bill.

He feels strongly about a Youth Conservation Corps bill, which he has introduced for years, which he said would conserve human as well as natural resources. This bill has passed the Senate and it is expected to have a rough time if it ever gets to the House for a vote. It is still in the Rules Committee, because chairman Howard Smith of Virginia does not like its inter-racial aspects—white and Negro boys would share the same dormitories in the camps.

Concrete Covers Up Many Yard Problems

Add low concrete retaining walls or curbs to your yard for a trim appearance. The curb can be finished round or flat on top.

If you do not have a walk from your door to the driveway or street, now is a good time to add one. A walk to the incinerator, clothes line and garden are convenient and will add to the beauty of your home as well.

You might make concrete flagstone or stepping stone walks instead of the usual solid path for a different look. It's easy to work with concrete. Only ordinary tools are needed.

OLD TREES

Old trees, like aged people, have difficulties with respiration. Lack of water or food may cause the premature death of any tree.
