Religious Play Slated Tonight

"Rehearsal in Kerioth," a Heritage Players production will be presented by the First Christian church this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the church sanctuary at 209 South Oakdale avenue. The public is invited to attend the performance which will feature Carolyn Bartell and Steven Williams.

Miss Bartell is considered an exceptional actress and many consider her one of the outstanding actresses from the Northwest. Her home is in Tacoma, Wash.

Steven Williams, Seattle, Wash., is studying broadcasting at the University of Oregon and has toured in the past with the Heritage Players.

"Rehearsal in Kerioth" written by Ronald Coulter, of Eugene, director of the players, tells the story of a modern young actor and actress who are unsympathetically rehearsing the roles of Judas Iscariot and Mary of Magdala.

During the rehearsal they begin improvising scenes from the passion of Christ and the characterizations take control of them. In their imagination they become the characters. Thus in this strange way Judas is presented as a modern man and attempts to justify his betrayal in several different ways. He claims that his sin and Peter's sin is the same, that betrayal and denial are the same.

Ronald Coulter, Eugene, who wrote the play, also will act. Jeannine Kay, also Eugene, is program coordinator and operates the lighting and sound system.
