

Anniversary Observed

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stelle celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with an open house at their home, 525 Pearl street, Saturday, April 6. Nearly 100 friends and relatives attended.

Among those attending were the couple's eight children, Mrs. Lyl Brown, Mrs. Lowell Henry, Mrs. Jack Thomas, Mrs. Norma Pitman, John Stelle, Charles Stelle Jr., all Medford; Russel Stelle, Shady Cove, and Earl Stelle, Beaverton, Ore.

Of the couple's 21 grandchildren and seven great grandchildren, 18 grandchildren and two great grandchildren attended the open house.

Mr. and Mrs. Stelle were married April 6, 1913, in Chelsea, Okla. where they lived for two years before moving to Lakeview, Ore. They remained there for eight years, moving to the Rogue valley in 1922 where Mr. Stelle worked for the Medford School District 549C for 17 years. He is now retired.

The couple are active in Redman, Pochontas and Eagles lodges.

Eagle Point PTA Postpones Session

Eagle Point - A coming meeting of Eagle Point Parent-Teacher association has been postponed from April 23 until April 30 because of conflicting events, it was announced yesterday.

Among the women attending the annual Homemakers' Festival of Jackson county home extension units were (left to right) Mrs. R. C. Fremd, Ashland, retiring treasurer of Oregon State University who spoke Tuesday afternoon for the annual Homemakers' festival of the Jackson County Extension service. About 300 women, members and guests of 34 home extension units throughout the county, attended the all-day festival.

Family Life Specialist Warns Against Teenager Marriages

"Don't push teenagers into marriage" was the warning of Mrs. Roberta Frasier, family life specialist for Oregon State university who spoke Tuesday afternoon for the annual Homemakers' festival of the Jackson County Extension service.

Today's woman is unlike her grandmother, the speaker said. She colors her hair many shades, and before long may know how to prevent wrinkles in her face, control the bulges of her body and even "replace worn out parts."

Today's homemaker needs to know more about nutrition and less about how to cook; she needs to know more about home management, how to keep records and how to depend upon herself if she is forced to become the head of her family.

Ms. Frasier said that the present high rate of marriages among teenagers is not good and that "the trend can be changed if we want to change it." The family life specialist said that most teenage girls are not ready for the responsibilities of marriage and homemaking, that they need more education, more experience at being independent and more opportunities at something other than marriage.

It is the duty of parents to help train their sons and daughters for marriage and she said that "sons should be trained to have some sense of responsibility towards girls and women." Too many men approach girls with the idea of "exploiting them" she declared and said this leads to forced marriage and this in turn often means divorce.

"Girls are fair game for too many men," Mrs. Frasier stressed and reiterated that marriages arising from situations such as these usually end badly. Everyone needs to have a deep sense of responsibility to others in this complex world, she emphasized.

Mrs. Frasier believes that there is too much emphasis on competition in this country. "Instead of stressing 'better than' we should stress 'working with' among families and individuals," she said. "Don't keep comparing yourself with someone else. Do the best you can and don't try to 'keep up with the Joneses'."

The speaker said too many teenagers fail to finish high school and deplored the tendency in this country to complain that education is "too expensive." "Why do we judge everything by what it costs, instead of what it accomplishes?" asked Mrs. Frasier. "This nation cannot afford to let young people enter the world without sufficient education."

Describing teenagers, Mrs. Frasier said that among girls 15 to 19 years of age, 53 per cent are married, and that among boys of this age, 20 per cent are married. Many are unemployed, even though they are already parents.

Praises Teenagers - The speaker had much praise for the American teenager, saying they take more responsibility than they do in other countries. They are "big business" and are being subjected to heavy pressures in the retail markets, she added. Teenagers in this country in many instances work very hard, belong to many worthwhile organizations, make many decisions and sometimes are asked to do too much "around the house."

"Teenagers need more breathing time," Mrs. Frasier stressed, between being children and being adults. In this country it is sometimes hard for the individual to find his own identity, and have faith in himself, she added. The specialist pointed out that we have built up a "feminine mystique" which is moulding women into a pattern. "When the Communists do this we call it 'brain washing,'" Mrs. Frasier said.

Turning to the conditions which teenage girls as homemakers are facing, and may face in the future, Mrs. Frasier said young people are "highly mobile" and may live in foreign lands, out in space, or on the floor of the ocean. Today's woman is unlike her grandmother, the speaker said. She colors her hair many shades, and before long may know how to prevent wrinkles in her face, control the bulges of her body and even "replace worn out parts."

Today's homemaker needs to know more about nutrition and less about how to cook; she needs to know more about home management, how to keep records and how to depend upon herself if she is forced to become the head of her family. She needs wide experience, and new horizons. Homes were formerly looked upon as something to use for a lifetime - now a "disposable home" is within the realm of possibility. We already have different types of homes for different phases of life, she pointed out.

Mrs. Frasier said that some women should not marry and should not become mothers. Since womanpower is needed in business and industry, an unmarried woman poses few economic problems. "They can make a real contribution to society," she declared. The speaker urged her listeners to set a good example for their children and pointed out that adults urge a boy to "act like a man" and then when he follows this advice, he ends up in trouble. She believes that children should be taught to appreciate others, to have a sense of loyalty and integrity, should know how to face up to conflict and not just run away, and should be taught how to have confidence in themselves and a true sense of values.

"In this kind of climate, they will become good parents and homemakers," she concluded. Reports Given - During the morning session Mrs. Riddell Lage, Hood River, president of the Oregon Home Extension council, reported on the triennial meeting of the Associated Country Women of the World held recently in Australia. Mrs. Lage showed pictures taken during her journey. Music was furnished by The Lavaliers of Crater High school, directed by Norman Carothers.

Mrs. Lage was introduced by Mrs. Glen Allen, Medford, director of District V of the council, and Miss Joan Beasley, former extension agent for home economics and now 4-H club agent, introduced Mrs. Frasier. At the morning sessions Mrs. David Kahl, Eagle Point, chairman of the Jackson County Extension Advisory committee, welcomed the group and Mrs. Warren Christensen, Eagle Point, gave the invocation. Miss Dana Hochhalter, new county home extension agent, also greeted the women and committee reports were made.

Mrs. Allen conducted installation of new county committee members. They are Mrs. Paul Doe, Medford; Mrs. Alfred Fossdall, Central Point; Mrs. Glen L. Stewart and Mrs. Vincent Swinney, Medford, and Mrs. A. Farrington, Eagle Point. Hold-over members are Mrs. Kahl, retiring chairman; Mrs. J. W. Marson, Eagle Point, vice-chairman; Mrs. C. E. Chisum, Medford, secretary; Mrs. R. C. Fremd Ashland, treasurer and Mrs. H. Piete, Applegate.

The group will meet and elect officers in May. Seniors Schedule Slides; Sponsor Booth at Fun Fair

A trip to the historic city of New Orleans and the state of Louisiana will be the subject of the colored slide show to be given by Fred Framann, Ashland, on Monday, April 22 at 1 p.m. in the Senior Activity center, 601 East Jackson street.

These weekly travel shows continue to be popular to seniors and are free to all person over 50 years of age.

Last week the U.S. Forest service showed a film of the Olympic games held at Squaw valley.

During the illness of Dr. Frank Roberts, leader of the Arm Chair Travel group for the last four years, Mrs. K. J. Knutson and Mrs. Judd Greenman have carried on the program. This committee will continue this service until Dr. Roberts resumes the leadership.

The members of the Spanish class, which meets on Monday mornings, have arranged the room for the program before leaving.

Last week was a busy time for the arts and crafts and music groups. Besides their regular class work, members of the oil painting, copper tooling, and mosaic classes gave an exhibit of their work in a showing at the Cancer tea at Hillcrest orchards. Mrs. Gene Williams, teacher of the oil painting class, and Mrs. Nettie Williams, a former teacher, made all arrangements for the exhibit.

Friday morning a work crew of center members decorated a booth at the Crater Lions Fun Fair at the Medford Armory. Twenty oil paintings are hung in this booth and tables of copper tooling and mosaic work as well as wood carving are on display.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon, the Senior Center orchestra will play and sing at the booth. A string trio of the orchestra, William Pickell, Mrs. Flora Bell Price, and Mrs. Francis Barrett, will play the new Pear Blossom song and Mrs. Barret will sing it.

This song, composed by Mrs. Bertha Applegate Guchers, 1404 Thomas road, has just been published locally.

During the open hours of the Fair, center members have been acting as hosts at the booth.

A dessert luncheon and business session are planned for the Golden Link class of the First Baptist church, Thursday, April 25, in the home of Mrs. L. J. Knox, Magnolia street.

Programs of the center activities will be given to interested seniors who may visit the booth and use it as a rest center during the festivities. Copper tooling was demonstrated by Mrs. Hermine Beucema and other members of the class.
