Try 'Cephalic Surge' for Cold

New York-UP-Have a cold? Take a deep breath, hold it, for four or five seconds sharply contract your stomach muscles. Now exhale, wait half a minute, and repeat the procedure.

This simple exercise, says Dr. Ben E. Wagner of Berwyn, Ill., may bring relief if done in 10 or 12 cycles, at least twice a day, and preferably lying down.

Wagner described the exercise, which he calls the "cephalic surge," to 170 leading doctors attending a shipboard congress of the Pan American Medical association.

The Illinois doctor said he had become convinced after 33 years of general practice that if the "cephalic surge" is practiced faithfully morning and evening, it is "of definite benefit in the prevention of the common cold," or it may shorten a cold's course.

People who have high blood pressure, hernia or are prone to nose bleeds should not attempt the exercise, Wagner said. But otherwise, "it is considered a safe procedure."
