Monastery May Be Given Buddhists

San Francisco (AP) - San Francisco's "invisible monastery" may become a house of worship for Buddhists in the High Sierras.

The monastery, hidden from view behind the Mt. de Young Memorial museum in Golden Gate park, was a gift to San Francisco from William Randolph Hearst.

Mayor George Christopher has asked the museum trustees if they would be willing to give the monastery to a Buddhist congregation in Mendocino, a small town near Jackson, Calif.

Geese Identified With Bright Ties

Knockville, Tenn.—What does the well dressed goose wear?

In East Tennessee they're wearing bow ties in eye-catching colors, according to Bob Burch of the Knoxville office of the Tennessee state game and fish commission.

"In the Paint Rock refuge they're wearing blue bow ties and in the Hiwassee refuge they're wearing yellow," Burch said.

Game and fish commission officials in Tennessee decided the new garb will help them identify the honkers. The brightly colored bands are used to check the movement of geese to and from the different refuges.

The birds used to be marked with little metal bands around their legs, but with the bands we didn't know about their movement unless they were shot and the bands returned," Burch said.

"With these colored bow ties, it's easy to identify them with a pair of binoculars," he said.
