Goethals Medal To PP&L Engineer

Washington, D.C.—The Society of American Military Engineers has announced award of the George W. Goethals medal, its highest honor for engineering achievement, to E. Robert de Luccia, Portland, vice president and chief engineer of Pacific Power and Light company.

The citation is named in honor of the military engineer who built the Panama canal and is offered annually to an engineer in civil and military practice who has made the most eminent and notable contributions to engineering, particularly in design and construction.

In naming de Luccia, the society noted the Portland engineer's achievement include directing the design and construction of large hydroelectric developments, one of them the highest earthfill structure in the world when it was finished for PP&L in 1958, and hundreds of miles of electric transmission systems lines.

Also noted were his role as an organizer of the Rocky Mountain Power Pool after Pacific Power acquired electric service responsibilities in Montana and Wyoming, and his interest since 1955 in civilian atomic research for electric power production.

The society will present the Goethals medal at its annual dinner here May 20.

Chamber Group Favors Extension Of Daylight Time

The Medford Chamber of Commerce board has gone on record opposing House Bill 1233, a plan to include all state agencies dealing with natural resources under one over-all state department of natural resources.

This action, and approval of House Bill 300, which would extend daylight time through the month of October, was taken at the breakfast meeting of the board at the Rogue Valley Country club.

The remainder of the session was devoted to committee reports.

Jim Wariner, chairman of the Greeters, told the board weekly attendance at his committee's sessions had increased from 25 to 40 and that tours of plants and industries in the area are being planned.

Manager Don McNeil reviewed the Business Seminar held at the Rogue Valley Country club in cooperation with the University of Oregon. He said attendance doubled that of the previous year.

Vice President Manville Heisel asked the board's opinion of creating a number of new committees within the Chamber of Commerce structure. The proposed committees would serve the different geographical areas of greater Medford and special groups which might need this type of service from the Chamber.

Board members decided to defer action on the proposal until a more thorough study is made.

Postal Employees Honor Two Men

Al Bradford, recently appointed acting postmaster at the Medford post office, and J. A. Eidswick, retiring acting postmaster, were honored recently at a dinner given by postal employees of the Medford area at Kim's restaurant.

Eidswick has returned to full time duty as postal inspector for this district, the position he has held for a number of years.

John Gresham, vice president of the Medford Post Office Clerks' association, was master of ceremonies for the dinner. He was assisted by Randy Huggdahl, president of the Letter Carriers' association.

Gains made in working conditions during the past few years and employee-management willingness for continued cooperation in striving for "even better, more efficient postal service," were emphasized by the several speakers.

Budd Gail, assistant postmaster; Chet Silliman, superintendent of mails, and Boyce Kellogg, assistant superintendent of mails, represented the supervisors' staff on the program.

Larry Rose, past president of the State Association of Letter Carriers, spoke for his association.

Cancer Society Programs Are Reviewed by Director

Portland - The education and service programs of the American Cancer society's Oregon division during the past year brought information and assistance to more persons in the state than ever before, according to Dr. Orval Eaton, Medford ophthalmologist and Oregon chairman for the society's April crusade.

Dr. Eaton pointed out that early diagnosis and treatment can save the lives of many cancer victims and that the society's educational program stresses knowledge of cancer's 7 danger signals and regular physical check-ups.

Nearly one million pieces of educational literature were distributed throughout the state, the chairman reported, and 30,380 Oregon residents viewed educational films in 862 different showings. In addition 200 secondary schools in the state included ACS materials in their curriculum.

The professional education program also gained impetus during the year. Nine film showings were viewed by 259 physicians, and 1,211 nurses attended 50 film showings. There also were special showings that were attended by 175 dentists in the state.

In the area of service, Dr. Eaton listed these accomplishments: More than 700 volunteers working in 53 units provided 317,780 dressings for 900 cancer patients; Some $24,871 in cancer society grants supported 11 cancer registries, including the bone tumor registry at the University of Oregon medical school; A $2,000 grant to the Visiting Nurses association of Portland helped to pay for 678 visits to 86 home-care patients; Sickroom supplies from 10 loan closets maintained by the division's county units were provided for 183 patients.

Dr. Eaton explained that "these are just a very few of the activities carried on year-around by the cancer society with funds obtained each April during the crusade."
