Salem — Higher education buildings worth $25 million were given tentative approval Thursday by the Ways and Means Education subcommittee.

The priority buildings in the instructional and utility category were chosen from a $45 million list proposed by the State Board of Higher Education.

In addition, the subcommittee will act on buildings in the dormitory-student center category. The committee is considering a list worth $17.8 million, pared down from $29 million requested by the board.

The committee stressed that its decisions were subject to change, depending in part on "how much money we have."

If the instructional building list gets final approval, some of the buildings would be financed with general funds or a general bond issue. Other libraries and athletic buildings — would be financed under the self-liquidating program as dormitories are now. With bonds paid for out of earmarked student fees.

Of the general fund buildings, the committee gave top priority to the Oregon Technical Institute campus and to replacement of Campbell hall at Oregon College of Education.

Next in order were utility tunnel extensions at Oregon State, a boiler at the Medical School, a classroom - laboratory building at Southern Oregon college, a classroom-laboratory at OCE and a science-math building at Eastern Oregon college.

Catch-All Money Measure Debated In U. S. Senate

Washington — The Senate began debate today on a $1.4 billion catch-all money bill including a crackdown on lobbyists for Philippine damage claims.

No voting was expected on the bill before Tuesday.

Chairman J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee urged approval of a rider revising the 1962 Philippine War Damage Act to pay $73 million directly to the Philippine government, instead of to individual claimants.

The supplemental appropriations measure, already passed by the House, also included $450 million for President Kennedy's accelerated public works program.

The Foreign Relations Committee questioned Washington attorney Ernest Schein, an associate of Philippine claims lobbyist John A. O'Donnell, at length Thursday on why Schein had not registered as a foreign lobbyist while splitting fees with O'Donnell.

Disclosures by the committee last week of O'Donnell's activities led to quick action to redraft the 1962 claims law, which Congress passed against the administration's recommendations.

In other congressional business, the House Ways and Means Committee faced up to the need for a higher ceiling on the national debt so the federal government can pay its bills. The committee called Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon to a closed session to work out a compromise bill that would accommodate red-ink spending of the Kennedy administration through the summer months.

The recent hike in steel prices is expected to have no appreciable effect on consumer prices, a Labor Department official said. Arnold E. Chase, price expert for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, made the statement in testimony prepared for the House - Senate Economic Committee, which is investigating the price rise. He said that although the steel companies still were adjusting their prices, the overall price rise in steel from the mills was expected to be about 1 per cent.

Dellenback To Speed Constitution

Salem — Chairman John Dellenback of the House Constitutional Revision Committee said today extra meetings are planned in an effort to get a proposed new constitution to the floor for action in a week.

The House committee and its Senate counterpart have been meeting together all during the session.

The constitution was introduced on the House side, however, and would have to return to the Senate committee if it won the two-thirds House vote needed.

Signs are the House committee may make a few final decisions alone, leaving a handful of differences with the Senate committee to be resolved.

The two committees have agreed on most sections.

They still failed Thursday, however, to resolve two important issues: Legislative apportionment and selection of judges.

Differ on Judges

The Senate committee voted Thursday in favor of electing judges as at present. The House committee voted against the present plan. Some members said they favor initial appointment of judges, with subsequent election.

The House committee in a separate meeting, voted to restore the constitutional prohibition against lotteries that was taken out by earlier joint action.

The House committee approved articles 7-12 on an elective "watch dog" secretary of state, local government, public officers, tax-

Klamath Principal's Certificate Revoked

Klamath Falls — The teaching certificate of Klamath Union High school principal Willard McKinny has been revoked by the State Board of Education, City School Supt. Ray Hunsaker announced Thursday.

The action has the effect of removing McKinny from the post. No acting principal has been named.

Hunsaker said the board notified him the certificate was revoked as of April 23 because evidence has been secured that McKinny made false statements in his application.

McKinny declined comment beyond saying he would appeal the decision. Atty. Gen. Robert Y. Thornton has been asked for an opinion on whether McKinny could continue to hold his post pending an appeal, Hunsaker said.

Life expectancy in the United States since 1900 has risen from 47 to 70 years.

The United States uses 250 billion gallons of water a day.
