$926,000 Paid For TV Rights New York —UPI— Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the National Football league has announced that the television rights to the 1963 championship playoff game have been sold to the National Broadcasting company for a record $926,000.

That is the largest amount ever paid by a broadcasting network for a sing sports attraction for home television.

The 1963 title game will be played in the city of the Western division champion next Dec. 29. Rozelle said NBC was awarded the contract for one year following open bidding by the networks. Under the old contract, NBC paid $615,000 to televise each of the last two title games.

The NFL's single-network television contract for regular-season games is with the Columbia Broadcasting system at $4.65 million a year.
