

Rogue Snowmen of Medford and their families were invited to ski at Mt. Shasta bowl last Sunday and about 90 were in the group which accepted and spent the day on the slopes of the majestic California mountain. Skiing was excellent and a warm sun made the day doubly enjoyable. Wally Iverson (at left) and Bruce Friend, Weed, Calif., are shown in the lift just as they started for the top of the run.

Wayne N. Martell (center) president of Rogue Snowmen, was one of the skiers who spent an exhilarating day at the Mt. Shasta Ski bowl last Sunday. Pictured with the officer are Miss Marjorie Simonsen, Medford, and Delbert Johnson, Ashland. Frustrated by a snowless winter, ski fans are now joyful over the heavy April fall and the Shasta bowl management has announced that the deep pack will probably provide skiing throughout May. The scene at left is a typical one during the snow season.

Rogue Snowmen Visit Shasta Bowl

Skiing is fun for the whole family and last Sunday Mrs. Jack Hanel of Medford was helping small Sally Hanel learn how to manipulate the skis and poles. The tow and lifts in the bowl will operate today and will continue to operate each week and until lack of snow will close the season.

Dr. and Mrs. Harry Danielson and their family were part of the Snowmen delegation. Peering through her snow goggles is little Christa Danielson who reports that she is "learning how to ski from daddy."

A broken leg didn't keep Scotty Danielson from making the trip to Shasta bowl with his parents and he is pictured here talking with Chris Dawkins, son of the William Dawkins, Ashland. Of course, Scotty broke his leg while skiing, the accident having occurred during a ski excursion to Bachelor Butte near Bend, Ore.
