Benefit Dinner - Wilderville Woman's Society of Christian Service will hold a ham dinner April 27 at the Wilderville church. The new president of the society is Mrs. R. W. Bondielli.

King, Four Queens Attend Royal Wedding

London - In a hall of rice, and as bagpipes skirled, Princess Alexandra and her bridegroom, Angus Ogilvy, left St. James palace Wednesday for their honeymoon in Scotland. The bride was wearing a flamingo pink fitted suit with matching coat.

They had just come from their wedding reception in St. James palace attended by some 500 guests. The princess now will be known as Her Royal Highness Princess Alexandra, the Hon. Mrs. Angus Ogilvy.

The couple's wedding earlier that day in Westminster abbey was described as having a grander showing from British and European royalty than for Queen Elizabeth's wedding in 1947, after World War II.

Led by Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Phillip, more than 120 members of royal houses, including one reigning king, four queens and three crown princes were among the guests in the abbey. A crowd estimated at 500,000 watched the couple as they rode from the abbey to the palace in a glass coach drawn by four gray horses with two gold-liveried footmen.

Archbishop Presides - The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Arthur M. Ramsey, who performed the ceremony, conducted his first royal wedding in the abbey.

Princess Alexandra wore a magnolia tinted lace gown with a 20-foot train, designed by John Cavanaugh. With it she wore a matching veil held from a diamond tiara which had been worn by her mother, Princess Marina of Greece, when she became the bride of the Duke of Kent.

The gown which had an all-over pattern of acorns and leaves was made with a high neck and molded waist, and sleeves which came to the wrist. Her veil was edged with Valenciennes lace, a present from her grandmother, Princess Nicholas of Greece.

The bride's choice of child bridesmaids had been a surprise to many for she is five feet, nine inches tall, unlike her cousin, Princess Margaret, who selected young girls for her attendants because of her petite size. Princess Ann, 12, daughter of Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Phillip, headed the group of five girls who attended Princess Alexandra.

Their dresses were of stiffened white silk. Princess Anne's hair was styled with a chignon high on her head, encircled with a white band.

It was believed that Princess Alexandra chose the young bridesmaids as a diplomatic gesture. There are 18 unmarried princesses in Europe, all equally eligible to have attended her. She is a relative to many and is acquainted with all of them. To have made a choice could have offended those not chosen.

Princess Attends - Princess Anne held the bride's bouquet and stood through the ceremony. The other four bridesmaids with two young pages in white jackets and tartan kilts, sat on hassocks borrowed from Windsor castle.

The princess was escorted by her brother, the Duke of Kent, and the wedding group walked on a carpet of bright blue.

Best man was Peregrine Fairfax. Queen Elizabeth II was dressed in a pale green silk organza dress over which she wore a transparent coat of the same color, designed by Norman Hartnell. Her closefitting hat, massed with lilies of the valley, was designed by St. Cyr.

London - Scottish businessman, Angus Ogilvy and his bride, Princess Alexandra of Kent, are pictured above in a formal photograph taken after their wedding April 24, in Westminster abbey. The bride's gown of magnolia-tinted lace with acorn and leaf pattern was designed with a 20-foot train. Her veil was edged with Valenciennes lace which was a gift from her grandmother, Princess Nicholas of Greece. Her diamond tiara had crowned her mother at her wedding 23 years ago. The wedding was described as the prettiest and the youngest-looking royal wedding in the history of the abbey. The short-skirted look prevailed for the women's dresses and the trend was toward delicate, floating fabrics in light and gay shades. (UPI photo)

The Queen Mother was gowned in silvery lace with matching coat also designed by Norman Hartnell. The coat was bordered with a misty blue tulle.

Princess Margaret chose a yellow shift dress, by the same designer. Her coat of yellow organza was completely covered with yellow primroses. Her hat was a toque by St. Cyr which she wore tipped forward over her forehead.

Annual Spring Concert Planned in Eagle Point

Eagle Point - Eagle Point High school band and choir will present the annual spring concert Thursday, May 2, in the Multi-purpose room of the high school. The concert is scheduled to start at 8 p.m.

Choir selections will be "Say Ye to the Righteous" by Randall Thompson; selections from "My Fair Lady" by Lerner and Loewe; "Elijah Rock," a Negro spiritual and others of a classical and contemporary nature.

The high school band will play "The March Billboard," "Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring," "Selections From Victory at Sea" by Rodgers, "American Folk Rhapsody" and others.

Toastmistress Club To Meet

An orientation class for new members of Medford Toastmistress club is set for 7:15 p.m. Wednesday, May 8, in Girls Community club, just prior to the club's regular meeting to be held at 8 p.m. Speakers will be Mrs. J. D. Brummond, Mrs. C. H. Redmond and Mrs. C. A. Thatcher.

Princess Marina, the bride's mother, who also is the Dowager Duchess of Kent, wore a Hartnell-designed dress. In tunic style it was of cloth-of-gold and designed with an opening in the left side of the skirt which revealed an underskirt embroidered with gold metal beads and topaz drops. Her hat was trimmed with material which matched her dress.

The Duchess of Kent was dressed in a flamingo pink organza coat and dress embroidered with white circle motifs. It also had been designed by John Cavanaugh, who created the bride's gown.

The Duchess of Gloucester chose Victor Stiebel as the designer for her slim coat of pale pink grosgrain with wide-set mink collar. Her hat was of curled ostrich feathers in shaded pink with a tiny bow in front.

The newly married couple flew to Lossiemouth, Scotland and from there they planned to drive 40 miles to Birkhall to spend the first part of their wedding trip. A portion of their honeymoon will be spent in picturesque Cortachy castle at Kirtlemuir, Scotland.

Princess Alexandra is twelfth in line to the throne. Mr. Ogilvy, though a commoner, is from a noble family with long and close associations with royalty. Princess Alexandra and Mr. Ogilvy are tenth cousins once removed.

Both trace their ancestry to King James VI of Scotland who was to become James I of England.

The bridegroom was educated at Eton. He also served in the army and he attended Oxford where he received degrees in politics, philosophy and economics. He now is a director for 30 companies.

Mr. Ogilvy is a descendant of King Charles II. His father, the eleventh Earl, married a daughter of the Earl of Leicester.

Princess Alexandra, a descendant of Princess Elizabeth, aunt of Charles II, is a first cousin to Queen Elizabeth. Her father, the Duke of Kent, a brother of King George VI, was killed while on active service in 1942. Princess Marina is from Greece.

Queen's Party - Before the wedding Queen Elizabeth II had entertained at a royal dinner party in Windsor castle which honored Princess Alexandra and her bridegroom-elect. Some 100 guests attended. For the ball which followed the Queen opened the castle's Waterloo chamber of the castle. Nearly 2000 guests attended the event, described as the most glittering and the biggest at the castle for a century.

Twenty-eight of the royal guests at the wedding stayed at the castle. Among them were the King of Norway, the Queen of Greece, the Queen of Denmark, the Queen of Sweden, Queen Victoria Eugenie of Spain, Queen Helen of Rumania, the Crown Prince of Greece and the Crown Prince of Norway.

The floodlights of the castle were lighted for the first time since the coronation as the guests arrived for the Queen's dinner party.

Also previous to the wedding Queen Elizabeth II and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, took royal guests for a picnic in one of the rhododendron glades at the town of Virginia Water. The Queen wore a turquoise nylon hat with a matching duster coat. Later the group toured Ascot and Windsor forest.

Student Honored

Central Point - Miss Jan Bateman, a 1961 graduate of Crater High school now attending Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., has been selected as one of the 10 outstanding freshman women in Northwestern's Medill School of Journalism.

The 10 girls, chosen on the basis of academic achievement in journalism courses, were honored at a Chicago banquet by Theta Sigma Phi, national honor society for women in journalism.

Miss Bateman is attending Northwestern on a national Quill and Scroll scholarship and Elks scholarship, received as first place winner in Oregon and third place winner in the national Elks leadership contest. All American rating among high school newspapers.

Miss Bateman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bateman, 2130 Taylor road, Central Point.
