"LISTEN. DO YOU HEAR A HARMONICA?"

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

A SUSPICIOUS customer was considering the purchase of a cowhide jacket. "Are you sure this is first-rate material?" he demanded. "Well," ventured the sales clerk, "it held the cow together."

It's hard to believe, but it's just sixty-three years since Colonel John Jacob Astor created a wild commotion on Fifth Avenue in New York by driving an automobile down that thoroughfare. It was a sultry summer day in 1903 when a series of muffled explosions brought people running to the curb. Horses balked, pedestrians fled. Colonel Astor chugged into view in a steam-driven engine under the seat, and clouds of vapor enveloping in his wake. Suddenly a fire broke out under the seat. The good Colonel mistook the shouts of warning from onlookers as a deserved cheer for his accomplishment. Suddenly, however, he realized what was happening and made an undignified get for the pavement. The car burned to the ground, and the "Get a horse" crowd predicted again that automobiles were a snare and a delusion.
