
This Week's Plan for Home Builders

Rustic ranch homes today retain the traditional exterior characteristics but there is nothing old-fashioned about the way they are planned inside.

In planning a home you should not think in terms of so many rooms but according to areas and daily living activities. For example, here the sleeping area has been given the privacy and quiet of a self-contained wing, entirely separated from the remainder of the house. The service and informal living area of the house has been strategically placed at the rear while the more formal living and dining areas are at the front of the plan. All of these sections flow together to form one large zone for family eating, relaxing and entertaining.

Especially note how traffic flows from the entry to the living area, family room, rear patio and the short hall serving all three bedrooms. The patio entrance plus the direct access from the service to the family room eliminates any necessity of foot traffic through the kitchen and interference with mother's kitchen routine.

Corner Fireplace

The corner fireplace in the living room faces the entry and is ideally situated for furniture arrangement. However, if preferred, it could be relocated in the family room by your contractor.

Besides the more formal dining ell, there is a wide nook area in the kitchen for informal family eating. The kitchen can boast of a generous size pantry. The already ample size of the kitchen is visually increased by a partial opening next to the family room.

The laundry facilities are in the service along with a broom closet. A bath opens to this room and is readily accessible from this section of the house and the outside. Only a short distance separates the service entry from the garage.

A really outstanding feature of this home in the appealing master bedroom suite. Sliding doors open from this room to the patio, as do doors from the family room. One wardrobe opens to the bedroom while another plus a twin pullman lavatory are in the dressing room. Both the shower and water closet are in a separate compartment, which offers more privacy. To obtain an economical plumbing installation, the baths have been located back-to-back.

Storage facilities plus a workshop are part of the oversized garage. The roofed planter at the front of the workshop is a real eyecatcher.

Complete working drawings for this plan can be purchased at a cost of $7.50 for the first set and $5 for each additional set when ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these prices until Aug. 28. Please allow two to three weeks for delivery. The following home plan books are also available: Hallmark Homes, $1; Award Homes, $1; Town and Country Homes, $1; Homes for Living, $1; Homes of Distinction, $1; Ranch and Modern Homes, $2. All books, a $7 value, only $5. Send all orders for either plans or books to: Hiawatha Estes, post office box 404-T, Northridge, Calif.

New York –UPI– One auto manufacturer has finally found a practical use for tail fins.

The new Sunbeam Alpine sports cars utilize their tail fins to house the gas tanks. Result: a trunk twice as large as on previous models, and a bigger gas tank.
