Small Worlds Around Us

Corn Silk More Important Than Just To Be Smoked

As the corn field ripened under the late summer sun, many young farm boys noticed that the corn silk on the bulging ear turned brown and dry. They knew it could be rolled in a piece of thin paper and smoked.

The boys felt pretty worldly. If they didn't set the barn on fire or become deathly sick, they felt they were rapidly becoming men.

Some youngsters progressed a little further along in their thinking or sophistication, and imagined the dry corn silk was chewing tobacco just like that purchased from the store, and obviously enjoyed by the hired man. The dry, brown corn silk didn't taste like tobacco, but it gave the boys the feeling they belonged to the world of grown men when they chewed it.

But few farm boys, and many of their parents, may never have thought much about why the little beard of silk is always present, sticking beyond the husk to the ear. This soft material is very aptly named, for it does have a silky texture and is very important to the growing kernels.

Truth in Lending Bill Clears Senate

Salem—UPI—The Senate has given strong approval to a "truth in lending" bill patterned after a recently adopted Washington state law, and sent the measure to the House.

The proposal brings retail installment buying under regulations similar to Oregon's present auto sales law.

It requires that the dollar amount of interest and service charges be listed on the sales contract, and allows the buyer to prepay the balance and get a partial refund of the service charge.

The vote was 26-2, with Sens. L. W. Newby (R-Ashland) and Daniel Thiel (D-Astoria) casting the no votes. Sen. Walter Leth (R-Salem) was excused from voting, and Sen. Al Flegel (D-Roseburg) was absent.

Limelights Slate Visit To Medford

Ashland—"An Evening with the Limelights," popular folk song singers and musicians, have been announced by Dave Elliott, publicity chairman for the sponsoring organization composed of Southern Oregon college students.

The performance has been scheduled May 21 at 8:30 p.m. at Hedrick Junior High school, Medford.

Elliott said there had been much interest expressed by junior and senior high school students as well as SOG students and townspeople, to hear the Limelights again. At their last year's appearance, he pointed out that there had been a sell-out crowd in attendance at the event which also was staged in the same auditorium.
