Vote to Decide AAUW Fellowship Program

Branches of the American Association of University Women in Oregon will vote on action during the AAUW state convention last month in Gearhart regarding the Oregon state division fellowship program.

Notification that three-fourths of the state's branches must ratify the proposed by-law change was received Friday afternoon by the Medford branch president, Mrs. Calvin Smith.

Convention delegates had established the Oregon State Division Endowed American Fellowship Fund. This fund would receive at least $500 each year from state dues.

The Oregon state division AAUW graduate fellowships have been given to Oregon women every three years since 1928. The individual fellowships were for $1,500. Oregon is the only state with such a program, since other fellowships are administered by the AAUW National Foundation in Washington, D.C.

Change Planned
In the letter received by Mrs. Smith from Mrs. G. M. Whitney, Athens, Ore., state president, she explained that the proposed by-law change, as published prior to the state convention, was for discontinuance of the state fellowship and to transfer these funds to national control.

With state delegates establishing the Endowed fund and the subsequent voting (not unanimous) of the money to this fund, which is to be held until interest is sufficient for the awarding of a fellowship, Mrs. Whitney explained that this is an entirely different kind of fund, necessitating ratification by the branches.

Mrs. Whitney stated that she had conferred with Mrs. Paul Patterson, Salem, state parliamentarian, and Mrs. William Haupt, Los Angeles, a member of the association's committee on bylaws.

Prior to the state convention, the Medford branch voted not to support the proposed transfer of the fellowship from state to national control.

Some 14 Oregon women have received the Oregon Division fellowship. Among these is Dr. Betty Lou Dunlop, Ashland, associate professor of education and field supervisor of teaching at Southern Oregon college. She was elected vice president of the Oregon state division of AAUW at the recent convention.

Principle opposition to the program is voted at the state convention, is that money will not be available for fellowships until the fund has reached at least $50,000.

It was stressed that action taken regarding the Oregon fellowship will not affect the other AAUW branch fellowship programs. The Medford branch has contributed $5,238 to American and international fellowships since it was organized in 1936. For the past seven years it has contributed at least one $500 award and in 1957-58 $1,000 for two.

The amount contributed for fellowships this year by Oregon branches totaled $6,754.

Dean Speaks
Dean of Agriculture F. E. Price and Mrs. Roberta Frasier, family life specialist, spoke. They emphasized the importance of getting the message across to youth in rural areas that although the farm is a wonderful place to live many of them will have to find jobs and a place in a more urbanized society. Mrs. Frasier pointed out that individual attitudes determine to a great extent the acceptance of new knowledge. People believe they are "too old to learn" may be shortchanging themselves on many of the good things in life.

Mrs. Riddel Lange, president of OHEEC reported, on her trip to Melbourne, Australia, last fall as a delegate to the Associated Women of the World conference. Mrs. Lange was one of 3000 women from 25 countries who attended the ACWW conference.

She said that the main concern among women she met was to raise the standard of living among the world's families. They are also concerned about their role in helping youth prepare for off-farm jobs.

Packages of Sunshine

Use your favorite sugar or ginger cookie recipe and cut the dough into nice, thin rounds. Place a teaspoon of golden apricot jam and a few chopped pecans on half the circle, then fold the dough over like a Parkerhouse roll and seal with a fork. Prick each cookie, preheat the gas oven to 375 degrees, and bake the cookies 8 to 10 minutes. Be sure to leave at least one inch of space between the cookie sheet and oven sides so heat will circulate. This will insure even browning.
