Student Visits Canterbury, Other English Historic Sites

(Editor's note: This is another in a series of articles by Charles (Chuck) A. Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Moore, 1239 Watson dr., Grants Pass, former Medford resident. Young Moore is in England participating in the Experiment in International Living. He is a student at Lewis and Clark college, Portland.)

By CHARLES A. MOORE

March 6: This is the day for a pilgrimage to Canterbury in Miss Seldon's Cortina. The sun is back out today and the weather is warm.

Traveling mostly by country road, we got to see a lot of landscape. The county of Kent, known as the garden of England, certainly lives up to its label. A good part of our drive was along the famed Pilgrim's Way.

The Cathedral is a beautiful structure, but I prefer Westminster Abbey. Lovely Little Town - Canterbury is a lovely little town. The streets are in the main too narrow for dual traffic. There are delightful examples of Elizabethan architecture hanging over some roads.

But most interesting was an ancient looking low arch in the side of an otherwise obscure building. To my surprise and delight, I had stumbled on the Hospital of St. Thomas of Canterbury. The structure of 1180 A.D. was used through the centuries as a resting place for the pilgrims who had at last completed their long and perilous journeys to Canterbury. Its chapel is still in use for worship. Never before, even in more ancient structures, had I felt so deeply the antiquity of my surroundings.

Feeling at Home - March 7: The weather is great. It's even relatively warm. London better stay that way because we ran out of anthracite coal a few days ago and the other is low. Being in a smokeless zone, we have to burn smokeless fuel, and that isn't the easiest kind to get. We're not hurting yet though. We still have the paraffin stoves and an electric heater to help stretch the coal supply.

Medford Man Arrested On Parole Violation - Leslie Eugene Boss, 20, of 1204 Wittington ave., Medford, was arrested by Medford police Monday and lodged in Jackson county jail on a charge of parole violation.

Further charges may be filed against the youth, officers said today. Under questioning Monday, Boss admitted he had stolen a variety of auto parts and equipment from several places in the last four to five months.

Fire on Submarine Leaves Three Dead

Groton, Conn. - (UPI) - Three men were killed today when they were trapped by a flash fire in a tiny enclosure while working on the construction of the nuclear submarine Flasher.

Two other men were injured in the fire which broke out in the after trim tank of the Flasher, a sister ship of the Thresher which sank with 129 men aboard off the coast of Portsmouth, N.H., early last month.

The area was so small that it was necessary for Electric Boat workmen to cut a hole through the tank to remove the victims.

It is surprising just how a feeling for "home" can come in such a short time. I am perfectly at ease with the Seldons and wandering around London feeling as though I had never been elsewhere. It is a tremendous experience. And the Seldons have been marvelous about the whole thing. They have even offered to let us hold our farewell get-together for the families at their house.

March 9: Seldons and I spent the week end visiting the Chirgwin at Worthing. "Sunny" Worthing is a South-coast resort town of 87,000 inhabitants. Being only 80 years old, it is a modern town by English standards. Having London for my base of comparison, Worthing seemed to me to be unbelievably clean.

Worthing has a record of being one of the six top cities in England for sun-time. Example of Architecture - The Chirgwin house is a nice example of "between the wars" architecture. During this period practically anything went in styling. We even find Spanish style tile roofing appearing.

Mr. Chirgwin drove the Seldons and me on a rounded tour of the area which included the quaint little town of Arundel, with Arundel Castle picturesquely rising behind it.

March 11: From nine until five at the library, then Doug and I went to Chadwell School of Art to folk sing. The singing was fine but the most interesting part of the evening was when Doug chose a bus for us to get home. It just happened to be the wrong bus going the wrong direction. It will take him a while to live that down.

March 12: Today began my career of brass rubbing. Arriving at Westminster Abbey, I attended a divine service before starting.

Brass in Good Condition - The rubbing I did was Sir John Harpedon. Six feet in length, it is the only military brass in the Abbey. Dated about 1450, the brass is in good condition other than for the cloth mantle extending from the helm. It just doesn't extend anymore.

March 18: Rain let up a little today so Miss Seldon and I had a drive through the country south of London. The country down here is just beautiful.

Stopping in Westerham, I received a first-rate history lesson and a good laugh. At the ancient parish church we talked to the sexton. A jolly little man, he was only too eager to tell some of Westerham's history. In this church Sir Winston Churchill worshiped, and Gen. James Wolfe (later conqueror of Quebec) was baptized and worshipped. In fact, if you look down this hill you can see his house right over there. But he wasn't born at home. No, his mother walked up to the vicarage to see the vicar and didn't get any farther. In fact the room right behind that window was the very place he was born.

Sixteenth Century Brasses - Having noticed several fine sixteenth century brasses in the church, I inquired about rubbing and got this story: When the sexton had first come to the church he was unfamiliar with brasses. So
