Salem—UPI—The legislature continued to struggle Tuesday with various ways of paying for state campus buildings, including a proposal for a vote on a bond issue.

The Board of Higher Education asked the legislature a day earlier to authorize a vote next May on whether bonding for higher education construction should be expanded.

The Ways and Means Education subcommittee renewed its discussion Tuesday of the problems of financing college buildings.

The state general fund, —General obligation bonds that carry the backing of the state general fund, and can be repaid from the general fund if earmarked funds are not used.

Bonds Are Issued

—Revenue bonds, that cost more because in theory they do not carry general fund backing. In practice, however, they would be paid for out of earmarked money that would have to be replaced with general funds. Only a capricious state would let the bonds default.

The higher education system already issues general obligation bonds for self-liquidating buildings. It would like to ask the voters for authority to issue them for other buildings as well.

The subcommittee says it could issue such bonds for buildings like libraries anyway. The education board says it promised to issue them only for buildings that pay for themselves.

Revenue bonds don't require voter approval.

The board said Monday the legislature should authorize an initial revenue bond issue until the voters have a chance to vote on a general obligation bond issue in 1964.

The subcommittee must decide how, and in what proportions, to deal with the four fund sources.

Rep. Stafford Hansell (R-Hermiston) told other members of the subcommittee Tuesday: "There isn't any magic about this. Eventually it's all out of the general fund."

What the subcommittee must decide is how the college building needs compare with the available funds. It also must decide how much Oregon can afford to shell out of the general fund now for buildings, and how much should be spread out over the long run through one of the two kinds of bonding.

Group Discusses Budgets for Three City Departments

Budget requests for the 1963-64 fiscal year for three major departments — police, fire and public work — were reviewed at last night's meeting of the Medford citizens' budget committee.

Proposed budget for the 49-man fire department totals $355,392, compared to last year's budget of $333,547. The increase, in general, is due to salary adjustments in the new pay plan drawn up for the city by the firm of Griffenhagen-Kroeger earlier this year.

Fire Chief Gordon Barker said that the 64-hour work week for firemen, which was voted by last year's budget committee, has caused his department a great deal of difficulty, forcing him to make over 100 personnel transfers during the year to maintain standard staff at each station. He urged the committee to institute a 60-hour work week, which he said could be implemented with the addition of only one more man at a cost of $5,184.

The jeweler's training program, which encompasses the entire diamond curriculum offered by the Institute, involves a study of all phases of diamond technology, including evaluation procedures and grading for color, clarity and cutting. In addition to the study involved Johnson was required to grade and appraise a number of diamonds, which were checked by the staff of the Institute.

Champlin said that due to an increased case load — up over 11 per cent — the department needed an additional policeman, to release a male officer for patrol.

Public Works Director Vernon Thorpe said that discounting salary increases, his budget was "about the same as last year." Thorpe made a plea for overtime pay for certain members of his staff who "are forced to work when the contractors work," sometimes after hours or on week ends. They are presently compensated with compensatory time off.

Budget committee members indicated that library and water department budget requests will be reviewed at the next meeting.

Mining Discussed By State Director

Jacksonville — Hollis Dole, state director of geology and mineral industries, emphasized the importance of gold in world trade when he spoke before the Northwestern Mining council recently in Jacksonville Community hall.

The director also stressed the serious effect of continued deficit spending abroad on a dwindling gold supply. He brought out the importance of mining as a basic industry and the importance of the individual prospector in the discovery of new mineral deposits.

Dole said there still are possibilities for gold mining in southern Oregon and pointed out that the mining organizations in Oregon should work together to improve mining laws and fair metal prices.

The mining council displayed a selection of specimens of Oregon gold.

Resolutions To Seek Walks for Children

A resolution asking the Medford city council to authorize safety paths for elementary school students walking to school will be presented to the PTA's of Hoover and Roosevelt schools at their meetings this week, according to a spokesman for the two groups.

Since many Medford streets, especially those in new residential areas on the east side, have no sidewalks, youngsters walking to and from school constitute a hazard to themselves and to drivers who must swerve to avoid them.

The resolution to be considered by the PTA groups would petition the city council to determine the most heavily-used school routes and to provide safety paths or graded walks along those routes.

Parents interested in approving or opposing the resolution are urged to attend the Roosevelt PTA meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, May 9, or the Hoover meeting at 2:30 p.m. Friday, May 10.
