Cabinet Shakeups Hit Syria, Iraq; Trouble Seen for UAR

Syrian Premier Resigns in Wake Of Student Riots

By United Press International
Government shakeups hit Syria and Iraq Saturday, foreshadowing possible trouble ahead for the proposed new United Arab Republic.
In Damascus Syrian Premier Salah Bitar quit in the wake of a week of rioting by students and cabinet resignations.
Another government crisis forced the resignation of the cabinet in Iraq.
Bitar quit in the face of demonstrations by supporters of U.A.R. President Gamal Abdel Nasser, guiding light of the proposed new U.A.R. to be composed of the present United Arab Republic (Egypt), Syria and Iraq. He ran into opposition because he insisted that Syria remain autonomous within the new federation.
Baghdad radio in broadcasting the cabinet resignation said Premier Maj. Gen. Ahmed Hassan Bakr had been asked by the national council for the revolutionary command to form a new Iraqi government. The government had been in power since February when Premier Abdel Karim Kassem was overthrown and executed.
Tito Talks
Nasser, meanwhile, was aboard a yacht en route to the Adriatic island of Brioni for four days of talks with Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito. A Syrian delegation that went to Cairo for crisis talks last Wednesday was reported piqued by Nasser's failure to abandon his boat trip from Algiers to Yugoslavia in favor of a quick flight to Cairo for a conference.
The Syrian crisis seemed to be the more serious at the moment, inasmuch as the premier himself was forced out there. Bitar was succeeded by Culture Minister Sami Al-Jundi who heads a middle of the road government.

Nelson Urges Curb On Atomic Testing At Memorial Dinner

Predicting that someone in desperation is going to fire the atomic bomb if the testing continues, U. S. Senator Gaylord Nelson (D-Wis.), speaking before the 13th annual Roosevelt Memorial dinner here Saturday night, pleaded for a curb on atomic testing, a mutual reduction of the investment of armaments, preservation of this nation's natural resources, an increase in appropriations for education, and a realistic look at the automation problem.
Addressing a crowd of 300 at Hedrick Junior High school, Senator Nelson predicted that President Roosevelt, if he were here today, would not advocate the same solution to today's problems that he offered during his four terms in office.
"The approach to the problem of peace has to be a different approach since the advent of the atomic bomb," the speaker declared. "The continued testing of the atomic bomb, in view of a possible break through, carries with it the danger of placing the bomb in irresponsible hands, such as those of Castro."
The more testing, the more people will have the bomb, the senator from Wisconsin warned. "When China gets the bomb, we'd better be prepared to meet an agreement with all nations of the world," he said.
"If we continue to explode these bombs we are going to create a level of pollution that no one can adequately predict. There's not a single scientist in the world today who knows the effect this will have on the fauna and the flora of the world," the speaker ventured.
"What we should be doing is investing more in education of our youths to enable them to help raise the standards of the people of the world. How long are we in this country going to believe that a nation which spends $58.2 billion in national defense can't afford to invest in the solution of domestic problems? We have no greater responsibility than the education of our youth. We must give every youth all the education that his capacity can absorb," Nelson challenged his audience.
Referring to the 900,000 youths who have dropped out of high school and now compose an army of people unprepared for any job, the speaker explained, "There is no common labor market left in this country. We should be doing something about this problem and we aren't even talking about it."
"There is no stagnation in America, there is dislocation. That is the problem. We are making changes today in five or 10 years for which we were allowed 100 years for adjustment during earlier periods of history. Men are being replaced by automation and they must be trained for something else."
The senator condemned the destruction of natural resources, and the pollution of our lakes, rivers and underground water.
"We are destroying our natural resources at a rate more rapid than that of any nation in the history of the world," the speaker said, warning that action must be taken in the next 10 or 15 years or the cause will be lost. He asked for an appropriation of $300 million, instead of $60 million to save the natural habitat.
Nelson was introduced to the audience by Congressman Robert B. Duncan, who called for leadership to "dissolve the ominous cloud of war hanging over the world today."
State Representative James Redden, acting as master of ceremonies, read a tribute to Mrs. Roosevelt, received in a telegram from President Kennedy.

PTA Petition Asks Walkways for City School Children

The Roosevelt school Parent Teacher association last week unanimously approved a resolution asking the city of Medford to study, and construct if the need is determined, sidewalks or gravelled paths used by children going to and from school.
A similar resolution was to be presented to the Hoover PTA meeting Friday.
Mrs. Alice Rutter, program chairman for the Roosevelt PTA, presented the resolution, which was drafted by James McGoodwin, local attorney who has children attending Roosevelt school.
The resolution asks the city to survey the necessity for safety sidewalk areas along principal streets which serve as avenues for students. It also asks the city to construct safety sidewalk areas if the necessity for them is determined.
Roosevelt PTA members pointed out that the present proposal is not necessarily for paved sidewalks, but for paths or gravelled walks, the location of the walks would be determined by the city, and established at public expense.
PTA members feel that for the safety of school children and drivers, sidewalks or paths should be located on several streets in the vicinity of schools. Many paved street areas do not have sidewalks or paths.
The problem, PTA officials noted, is accentuated in areas with unpaved streets. There are no walkways in many of the more concentrated school-age children areas in the city.
A sidewalk proposal was defeated by Medford voters some years ago following a survey by City Engineer Vernon Thorpe and Leonard B. Mayfield, now superintendent of Medford schools.

Calm Returns To Birmingham After Integration Pact

Washington Lauds Peace Agreement

Birmingham, Ala. - (UPI) - The Negro section of Birmingham Saturday was hardly recognizable as the same area where just a week ago police and 3,000 Negro demonstrators locked in four hours of pitched battle.
A week's time and an integration agreement worked out on Friday replaced chaos with calm.
Shoppers - both white and Negro - went normally about their business in the downtown area, and the church that served as a rallying point for the thousands of demonstrators last week attracted only a few Negroes Saturday.
The agreement, which the city's leading business group said was necessary to prevent an "imminent explosion," drew praise from official Washington, and resentment on the part of many here.
Klan To Meet
A Ku Klux Klan meeting was called for Saturday night in the suburb of Bessemer to discuss the agreement. The Klan has shrunken to a shadow of its once powerful self and has not been regarded as a major force in the South in years.
The Negroes also planned a mass meeting to review the agreement, which they concede is merely a starting point and not an end answer to the decades of segregation.
"We don't feel that we are through with Birmingham yet," said Wyatt T. Walker, one of the leaders of the local desegregation drive.
But Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in announcing the integration agreement Friday, said he had "been deeply impressed by the quality of the white persons of the community who worked so diligently for solution to our mutual problems." He said he felt sure the city could now look forward to "continued progress."

Haiti-Dominican Republic Conflict Nears Settlement

OAS Team To Visit Troubled Nations

Washington - (UPI) - Settlement of the Haiti-Dominican Republic conflict shaped up strongly Saturday as the Organization of American States prepared another on-the-spot inquiry of the friction between them.
OAS Council Chairman Gonzalo Facio said the truce team was tentatively set to leave Washington late Monday or early Tuesday. Both quarreling governments were said ready to cooperate with the delegation.
Settlement became assured Friday night when Haitian Foreign Minister Rene Chalmers promised U. S. and OAS officials his government would allow the OAS team to return to Haiti and would give exit visas to all refugees.
The truce team, which visited the two Caribbean countries last week, will first go to the Dominican Republic.
Terms Ends
The OAS representatives probably will be on the island of Hispaniola shared by Haiti and the Dominican Republic Thursday - the day when the constitutional six-year term of Haitian President Francois Duvalier is scheduled to end.
Duvalier announced last May that he was reelected in congressional elections despite the fact his term did not end until this year.
During the last few months, Duvalier's enemies have been plotting to overthrow him because he takes the oath of office again. Duvalier plans to celebrate the start of his new term this week.
Diplomats here and in Haiti anticipate a new rash of attempts to oust Duvalier during the next few days.
Despite the enlarged powers given by the OAS to its truce mission this week, the OAS team cannot involve itself in the internal political affairs of the island.
By allowing his political enemies to leave the country as demanded by the Dominican government, Duvalier will speed up the final settlement of the 14-day old conflict.

GRIPS RAIL - Soviet citizen Oleg Penkovsky grips dock rail as his death sentence before a firing squad is pronounced in Moscow, Russia, Saturday. A former scientific official, Penkovsky admitted collaborating with British businessman Greville Wynne in spying, reportedly, for British Intelligence service. Wynne received an eight-year prison term. (UPI)

Two-Day Meeting Marked By Mood Of Conviviality

Leaders Issue Joint Statement

Hyannis Port, Mass. - (UPI) - Canadian Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson promised President Kennedy Saturday he would install nuclear weapons in Canada as fast as possible as part of North America's defense against a sneak Russian atomic attack.
However, both Kennedy and Pearson made it clear that any arrangement with Canada would have to be "consistent with Canadian parliamentary procedures."
The two-day meeting between the two leaders was held in a convivial mood. It appeared certain to improve the relations between the United States and Canada which have been somewhat strained in recent months.
As the conference ended, Kennedy and Pearson issued a 17-point communique in which they said a number of important matters pending between the two nations were "frankly discussed in a spirit of good will and understanding."
The acceptance of U. S. nuclear warheads for Canada's Bomarc missiles was the issue that triggered the downfall of former Canadian Prime Minister John Diefenbaker's government.
Defense Commitments
The U. S. State Department charged that Diefenbaker had not lived up to defense commitments. Diefenbaker accused the State Department of meddling in Canadian affairs.
Shortly after the communique was issued, Pearson had lunch with Kennedy at his home overlooking Nantucket Sound, then flew by helicopter to Otis Air Force base for the return flight to Ottawa.
Kennedy was to return to Washington at 6:30 p.m. (EDT) after a side trip to Cambridge, Mass., on the edge of the Harvard university campus, to inspect several sites for a library which will later house his official papers.
In the communique, the two leaders said they "reaffirmed their faith in the North Atlantic Alliance and their conviction that, building upon the present foundation, a true community of American peoples will one day be realized."

Soviets Announce Plans for Tests

Moscow - (UPI) - The Soviet Union Saturday announced plans for new rocket tests in the Pacific, possibly as a prelude to the flight of the first woman cosmonaut.
The official Tass news agency said the tests would be conducted between May 25 and July 15 "with the aim of furthering the conquest of space."
Soviet scientists will test "perfected variants of carrier rockets for space flight purposes," the announcement said.
Western observers in Moscow speculated that the Russians might be planning to check flaws in current models of their space rockets as well as to seek development of new ones for future manned space flights. The Soviets have hinted several times earlier this year that they will seek to place a woman in orbit.

Rogue River Sets School Levy Vote

Rogue River - Voters of the Rogue River School district will vote from 2 to 8 p.m. Monday, May 13, on the advertised levy of $243,410.
This is an apparent increase of $29,000 over last year's budget, according to Supt. John B. Harr.
"The receipts items which cannot be shown on the budget, plus the increase of the assessed valuation of the district, will, in the opinion of the budget board, leave the tax millage at approximately its present level," Harr said.
"The lack of any final action by the legislature makes the exact estimate of these offset receipt items difficult, but they should total in excess of $50,000, lowering the levy to the anticipated level," he explained.
The increase in the operating budget is the result of six factors: increased prices of supplies, increased enrollments, teachers' salaries, purchase of a new bus, major repair to the primary building roof, and increased adoption of elementary text books, Harr said.

Basements Flooded In Downtown Area

Two downtown stores in Medford received water in basements due to Friday night's big downpour of rain and the torn up street.
F. W. Woolworth company, 39 North Central ave., reported six inches of water covered the basement after pouring in through the exposed dirt under the street pavement. The sump pumps removed much of the water, and store personnel were able to shift stored goods to avoid damage to them, the manager reported.
Some merchandise in the basement of Hubbard Brothers store, 335 East Main st., reported water seeped into their basement covering the floor to a depth of 1 to 1 1/2 inches. The sump pump in the elevator shaft took care of most of it although bottom layers of goods such as nails and some sporting goods were soaked, store officials said.

Red Scientist Gets Death Penalty for Pro-West Espionage

Moscow - (UPI) - The Soviet Supreme Court Saturday decreed the death penalty for a playboy Russian scientist and eight years imprisonment for a British businessman who had admitted spying for the United States and Britain.
In the windup of Russia's most sensational spy trial since the U2 case three years ago, the court also condemned the activities of several present and former members of the U.S. and British embassies in Moscow and hinted that further action might be taken in the case.
Greville Wynne, a businessman who said he was tricked into spying by the British Intelligence Service, was ordered to spend the first three years of his sentence in prison and the remainder in a corrective labor camp.
Oleg Penkovsky, a former Soviet scientific official, was ordered stripped of his medals before facing the firing squad. He had been accused of high treason.
The maximum penalty for both defendants was death and the minimum seven years. The prosecution Friday in winding up its case had asked a 10-year sentence for Wynne.
Under Soviet law there is no appeal from the court decision.
Both defendants had admitted their guilt soon after the state of the trial last Tuesday, but Wynne said he had been made an unwilling accomplice of British espionage agents. Penkovsky was described by one witness as a lover of wine, women, and song who once drank champagne from a girl's slipper at a wild party in Paris.
It was assumed in diplomatic circles here that within a few years Wynne would be sent back to England, perhaps in a diplomatic swap for a convicted Soviet spy. In the U2 reconnaissance plane case pilot Francis Gary Powers was released after two years in an exchange for the Soviet's Col. Rudolph Abel, who had been sentenced for espionage in the United States.

More Rain Forecast For Medford Area

Nearly an inch of rain fell in the Medford area Saturday, and more of the same is expected for at least the next five days. A series of storms is coming across the Pacific ocean at 24 to 36 hour intervals, the Medford Weather bureau reported.
Precipitation for the 24-hour period ending at midnight last night totaled .88 of an inch, bringing the total for May to 2.90, which is 2.39 inches above normal. The season total now is 26.33, or 8.92 inches above normal.
Snow fell in the mountains early Saturday, but state police said the pavement was bare on most highways leading out of the valley.

Springfield Woman Killed in Collision

Eugene, Ore. - (UPI) - Marjory Alta Williams, 36, of Springfield was killed in a collision between two autos on State Highway 2 about one mile west of Jasper Saturday.
The other driver, Sherman Warren Neely, Creswell, was charged with negligent homicide and held in the Lane county jail on $2,000 bail.
State police said Neely's car apparently swerved into the path of Mrs. Williams' vehicle. She was thrown from the car and killed. Neely suffered only minor injuries.

Sentencing Slated For Convicted Man

Reno, Nev. - (UPI) - The sentencing hearing of confessed killer Lester Morford will begin June 3 in Washoe district court before a panel of three district judges.
Morford, 19, of Santa Rosa, Calif., admitted the fatal shooting of Jack Foster, Medford, Ore., near here last year.
The judges will hear evidence in the case, determine the degree of guilt and set the penalty, which could be execution in the gas chamber.
Morford was arrested near Carson City last August shortly after he kidnaped Foster and his bride of two days from the parking lot of a downtown Reno motel. Investigators said he forced the couple to drive around the Lake Tahoe area, then shot Foster twice and raped his wife twice before she could escape from the car.

Special Education Budget Is Reduced

Salem - (UPI) - A $786,000 reduction in the governor's proposed budget for special education programs in Oregon schools was voted Saturday afternoon by the Ways and Means Education subcommittee.
The cuts, however, were offset by $1.1 million added earlier by the subcommittee to special programs for mentally retarded and physically handicapped children.
The basis for the cuts was a policy decision by the subcommittee that the state should begin to withdraw from special programs.
Rep. Stafford Hansell (R-Hermiston) said the intent should be to stimulate local school districts to take over and carry on the special programs.
The cuts were made in the governor's proposed $155 million budget for schools and for the department of education. Most of that sum is for basic school support, a subcommittee said. The committee has not yet touched.

Forgotten Sentinel Stands Ground Amidst Live-Ammunition Maneuvers

Yakima, Wash. - (UPI) - There was Private Daniel J. Arthur peacefully guarding his own private make-believe mine field.
And there, on all sides of him, were 40,000 soldiers on maneuvers armed with very real ammunition.
"I was kind of happy being away from everybody," said Arthur, who had not been told to leave his guard post Thursday in Exercise Coulee Crest, largest peacetime maneuver in the West since World War II.
Jets swooped overhead and dropped fire bombs.
"I tried to wave at them but they didn't see me," said Arthur today. "Then I realized I had the whole army chasing me. With guns."
Arthur couldn't dig in. Under Helmet
"The ground was just too hard," he said. "I just got under my steel pot helmet and waited."
It was not a long wait. Heavy artillery began zeroing in on Private Arthur.
Then, Private Arthur saw what he thought were trucks approaching.
They were tanks. The tanks opened up at him.
Private Arthur hit the dirt. Eventually, the tanks rumbled off over the desert churning up dust on the Yakima firing range.
A group of men approached. Began Firing
Arthur got up happily, fired three shots into the air and started walking toward them. The infantrymen dropped to their knees and began firing at him.
Back to the helmet.
Finally, the infantrymen realized Arthur had been left out in no man's land by mistake and stopped firing.
Gen. Paul D. Adams, commander in chief of the U. S. Strike Command, said new safety procedures would be established so no other soldier would be left to meet a similar fate during next week's firing here.
Private Arthur also got a four-star compliment from the general.
"A brave man and faithful to his orders," said General Adams.
