Limelitters Plan Concert in City Tuesday Evening

Ashland—The Limelitters, well-known RCA Victor folk singing trio, will present a show at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 21, in the Hedrick Junior High school auditorium.

Their appearance is being sponsored by the "Mugs," an off-campus organization composed of Southern Oregon college men students. Tickets may be purchased at Puruckers in Medford; the Melody House in Grants Pass; at Southern Oregon college; and at the door.

Louis Gottlieb, bass-playing spokesman for the group, has a Ph.D. in musicology, which partially explains the professional manner of making hilarious introductions; these explanatory remarks, which fans have come to cherish as much as the music itself, are accurate take-offs on academic stuffiness.

Alex Hassilev, were it not for his devotion to the group, could easily crash the matinee idol circuit, as he is an accomplished actor. The 27-year-old linguist speaks half a dozen languages fluently and sings in more than 20 tongues and dialects. In addition, Hassilev is a recognized banjo and guitar virtuoso.

Glenn Yarbrough, a vocal star in his own right before joining the Limelitters, plays the classical guitar and is the main solo singing voice of the trio. A lyric tenor of clarity and warmth of tone, Yarbrough approaches each song with an unaffected simplicity that wins immediate audience response.

A sell-out crowd attended the performance of the Limelitters when they appeared last year in Medford.
