Can you help the Dizzy Bee find his way home?

Many-Color Magic

By Evelyn Pickering

Here is a way to write your name or draw a picture in many colors without changing pencils.

Get a plain sheet of paper and a box of different-colored crayons. Run the crayons, one at a time, across the paper, forming separate bands of color. Now turn the colored side face down on top of a clean sheet and write or draw on the back of it. The pressure of your pencil will transfer the lines you make onto the clean sheet and cause them to show up in many brilliant colors.

Drop-a-Letter— Guess What I Am!

By Bertha R. Hudelson

I am a piece of money, but—
If minus my last letter—
I am a man, in early days,
Who helped our land grow better.

Again drop my last letter. Now
I'm something used by you
To write your lessons, notes, and name,
And many more things, too.

Apple Grab! By Ragna Eskil

Place an apple in the middle of a table. The players march around the table, allowing a space of two feet between them and the table. Someone plays, hums, or thumps a tune for the marchers, then stops suddenly. When the sound stops, all the players grab for the apple. The successful grabber wins, of course. If players want another round, provide another apple!

Two high-school girls were talking about their boy friends. "Yes," said one, "he's very polite and proper. He has never once tried to kiss me good night."

"Oh, a perfect gentleman?" the other asked. "That's right," the girl replied. "Of course, that kind is better than no boy at all."

Two widows took their savings and bought a cottage in an isolated section of the county. When one returned to the city to do some shopping, she was asked if they found it lonely so far away from everyone.

"Well, my friend and I aren't exactly lonely—we have each other to talk to," the woman replied. Then, after a little thought, she added: "What we really need is another woman to talk about."
