

Police Officers To Attend School At Withycombe

Two Medford police patrolmen plan to attend a two-week police training school for new officers conducted by Oregon state police at Camp Withycombe. The school starts today and continues through June 1.

Attending will be David L. Wells, who has been with the local force for two months, and Charles W. Eagle, who has been with the force five months.

The school's training is under the supervision of a committee of the Oregon Association of City Police Officers. A member of the committee is Medford Police Detective Lt. Lyle C. Perkins, who is now in Washington, D.C., attending the FBI National Academy.

Medford Police Lt. Jack McMillan will instruct one of the sessions Monday, May 27, on case preparation and court-room procedure.

The school consists of two weeks of intensive training with instructors from Oregon state police, FBI, sheriff's and city police departments and members of other federal agencies and the District Attorney's association are available upon request.

The city pays $25 per week per man at the school for room and board.
