

UN Claimed Facing Grave Money Crisis

United Nations, N.Y. — The United Nations, confronted with its gravest crisis since the Korean War or Russia's 1960 drive for a "troika" administration, made slow progress today toward solving its financial crisis.

It was U.S. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson who told the Latin American countries in a private meeting Thursday that Russia's sweeping extension of its "no pay" policy to include other budgetary items confronted the world organization with one of its worst situations.

Stevenson appealed for the same unity that created the UN Command in Korea and that overwhelmingly defeated the Soviet attempt to put in a hamstringing "troika" administration—so dubbed after the famed three-horse Russian sleigh teams.

The Latins listened to Stevenson—as the 56-nation Afro-Asian group listened to Soviet Ambassador Nikolai T. Fedorenko the day before—but there was little indication that either group was won over.

Consultations on a financial formula continued as the General Assembly's Budgetary committee went back into session after a one-day lay-off, with China the only listed speaker.

Aggravates Crisis

Fedorenko aggravated the financial crisis at the committee's last previous meeting on Wednesday after he announced that, in addition to refusing to pay a single kopeck for UN peace-keeping operations in the Congo and the Middle East, Russia would withhold payment on other budgetary items. These included interest and retirement payments on the $137 million UN emergency bond issue, the world organization's activities in Korea and Palestine; the UN Field Service, and contributions on the technical assistance program except in Red rubles to pay only for Soviet technicians and materials used in the development schemes.

Stevenson, dramatically emphasizing to the Latin Americans the grave consequences of Russia's new position—which would cost the nearly bankrupt United Nations an additional $1.16 million a year in contributions—declared that the current special assembly session must find ways of financing the Congo and Middle East programs for the rest of this year. Secretary General Thant has requested $42.5 million for that purpose.

New Rules Issued In Determining Access Road Fees

Portland — New rules issued by the department of the interior permit the bureau of land management to recognize uses other than logging in determining fees to be paid for the use of forest access roads in western Oregon. BLM State Director Russell E. Getty has announced.

The new rules also change the requirements under which a "basic" fee is paid to BLM for the use of such roads.

Getty explained that some BLM logging roads in western Oregon are being used for purposes other than hauling timber, and that under the new rules BLM would consider other uses in amortizing the cost of its roads and in calculating the fees to be paid for logging use. He pointed out that one use, other than logging, that is on the increase in western Oregon is public recreation.

Charge Called For

In connection with the basic fee to be charged for log hauling on BLM roads, the new rules call for a charge of $5 per year per mile or fraction of a mile, unless an amortization road use fee is being paid or a reciprocal right of way agreement has been made with BLM. Getty said, where a basic fee is required and the term of the road use permit is for five years or less the entire basic fee must be paid in advance. For road use permits running longer than five years the basic fee must be paid in five-year intervals, Getty explained.

Previously, the basic fee of $5 per mile per year had to be paid in all cases except under a road use permit in which a reciprocal right of way agreement had been incorporated.

Getty said the BLM staff in the Oregon - Washington state office in Portland is presently drafting procedures to implement the new road use rules.

Defense Contracts Offered for Ties

The Defense Construction Supply Center, headquartered at Columbus, Ohio, is offering a total of more than $3,000,000 in defense contracts to interested members of the West Coast tie-producing and wood treating industries during the next three years.

Brig. Gen. Walter A. Hunstberry, commander of Defense Construction Supply Center, in coordination with Col. James H. Beddow, commander of the U. S. Army Engineer District, Walla Walla, Wash., said the Corps of Engineers will require approximately 550,385 creosoted hard wood and softwood ties of 24 million board feet, for the relocation of the Union Pacific and the Spokane, Portland and Seattle railroad tracks at the John Day Dam project on the Columbia river during the next three years.

In addition, an estimated 60,000 creosoted ties, utilizing 2 1/2 million board feet, will be required for relocation of railroad trackage in the Little Goose project area during 1964 and 1965.

Contracts will be awarded through regional procurement sub-office at 783 Pittcock Block, Portland 5, Ore.

Washington — (UPI)—President Kennedy Thursday signed into law a $15.3 billion procurement authorization for the Defense Department.

Tax Conferees Still Deadlocked on Issues

Salem—(UPI)—Apparent agreement on a cigarette tax was reached Thursday by Senate House tax conferees—but the committee remained deadlocked on the income tax issue.

It marked the seventh day of the deadlock over a program to raise an additional $60 million to finance a $405 million general fund budget for the biennium beginning 37 days from now.

House conferees Richard Eymann (D-Marcola) and F. F. Montgomery (R-Eugene) stood firm in their demand for a net receipts tax.

Senate conferees Donald Husband (R-Eugene) and Glen Stadler (D-Eugene) were equally firm in declaring the Senate would not approve a net receipts program.

First apparent break came Thursday afternoon when Stadler proposed a 4-cent a pack cigarette tax with $3 million to go to cities. Stadler also called for holding the one-shot withholding tax collection in reserve in case the cigarette tax was referred to the voters.

Position Stated

"I don't think the Senate will go for the cigarette tax, unless we make it a part of a program that includes something pretty close to the income tax program approved by the Senate," Stadler said.

Eymann and Montgomery agreed to use the cigarette tax, and to hold the one-shot program in reserve. They did not agree to accept the Senate income tax plan, however.

"No matter what income bill we adopt, the House wants some net receipts features in it," Eymann said.

When committee sessions resumed Thursday night, Stadler said he had taken a poll which indicated senators "probably would vote for a cigarette tax if it is part of a program that includes the Senate income tax proposal."

Husband said the Senate would not approve the governor's net receipts tax which was proposed Wednesday by House conferees.

Compromise Offered

Stadler then proposed a "compromise" version of the Senate income tax measure patterned closely after the present law, and including a capital gains feature.

After a short recess House conferees submitted their "compromise" net receipts proposal which included a $5 filing fee, and a 1 per cent "progressive receipts" tax with a $1,000 deduction.

Eymann said he would not make any recommendation at this time on either a capital gains measure or an increase in corporate excise taxes.

Montgomery asked: "What is our roll as conferees, are we expected to compromise our own position?"

Eymann said "Our job is to come up with a program. We don't have to trade item for item. We (the House) already compromised in the bill we sent to the Senate."

The House bill rejected by the Senate was a modified net receipts plan.

One feature of the House plan is elimination of all deductions.

The committee was to meet again some time today.

White Wig Topic Of State GOP Club

Portland — (UPI)—A white wig was among the topics brought up at a meeting of the Oregon Republican Club Thursday.

A member said the GOP could expect to lose votes when the governor's wife wore a white wig. Mrs. Mark Hatfield appeared in a white wig at the recent charity ball which opened the Hilton Hotel here.

Club members also expressed favor of Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona for the GOP presidential nomination and heard one member, Wallace Lee, charge the Democrats "have tied themselves to welfare statism."

Radio Week Topic Of Kiwanis Lunch

International Radio Week was observed by Medford Kiwanis club Wednesday when Ray Johnson, manager of KMED radio and television, spoke on "Radio, Your Good Citizen."

Johnson, a member of the service club and addressing its noon luncheon, discussed the role of radio as a companion, informer, entertainer, community servant, contributor and sales media.

The radio executive spoke of the fears, on the advent of television, that the new medium would "kill" radio. But, he pointed out that radio is stronger than it has ever been, that there are 4.3 working radios per family in the United States and that radio is a mobile medium.

Johnson told of the place of radio in providing instant knowledge of world events and he brought out the variety of types of entertainment provided by the seven radio stations in the valley.

Radio was described as a most underpriced and misused sales medium but yet one of the most effective because of its "one to one" speaking.

Johnson also spoke of radio as being beleaguered and harassed and not really a free enterprise because of federal control. He mentioned the efforts of federal communications commission "underlings" to put more and more control on programming.
