

Committee Work On General Fund About Complete

Salem — (AP) — Committee work on a $404 million general fund spending program for 1963-65 was virtually completed late Monday when the Ways and Means committee approved a $77.3 million higher education operating budget. But the committee that sits in judgment on Oregon's money matters gave the back of its hand to heavy pressures for more improvements in pay for college teachers and state employees.

The $404 million represents what the state will spend in taxpayers' money. It is about one-third of the total budget. The rest comes from special and federal funds.

The $404 million is about $1 million under the original general fund budget figure proposed by Gov. Mark Hatfield. But it represents considerable juggling of funds, substantial cuts and some new expenditures.

The higher education budget indicates where most of the money will be spent — on education.

Federal Funds Help
The $77.3 million will pay more than half the cost of operating the state's colleges and universities, as well as taking care of the Medical School teaching hospitals and clinics, the Crippled Children's division, agricultural and forest research, and educational television. Another $56 million will come mostly from federal grants and student fees.

The $77.3 million is down $4.3 million from the governor's original request, mainly in money for new teachers. The committee decided to empty the University Tuberculosis hospital at Portland and move its patients to the State TB hospital at Salem for a $646,000 saving, since the Salem hospital has been operating under capacity.

The committee sent a bill for salary improvements for college teachers and state employees back to the House floor without restoring any of the money it trimmed earlier.

Emergency Fund OK'd
It approved a $2.2 million state emergency fund, fatter than usual, and some members suggested higher education might try to get more salary improvement money there.

The committee approved $701,000 to pay for the rest of this legislature, the interim, and the start of the next. A $1.2 million appropriation for the present session was made earlier.

It also okayed $215,000 for 12 interim committees on wildlife, technology, education, higher education budgeting, insurance, highways and tourism, taxation, state buildings, fire control, the national legislative conference, the legislative orientation conference, and interstate cooperation.

Everest Climbers Under Treatment For Frostbite

Katmandu, Nepal — (AP) — A historic American mountain-climbing expedition packed up today for the long trek back from the slopes of Mt. Everest to join two climbers flown here by helicopter for emergency treatment of frostbite.

The two frostbitten mountaineers, William Unsworth, 36, Corvallis, Ore., and Barry C. Bishop, 30, Washington, still did not know whether they would lose their toes.

Dr. Norman Berry, Philadelphia, said at the United Mission hospital here that all the toes of both men were bruised and blue with frostbite and their feet were raw with blisters.

But he said it was too early to predict whether any toes would have to be amputated. "They're weary but generally in good shape," Berry said. "They have suffered no weight loss or dehydration and that's a boon."

Berry said the men would stay in the hospital until the rest of the expedition returned. He examined them after they arrived here Monday on an emergency flight from Namche Bazar, 170 miles east of Katmandu, 12,000 feet up the world's highest mountain.

The remainder of the expedition planned to leave Namche Bazar on foot Wednesday for the 12-day hike down Dudhkosi River Valley and across mountain ranges to Banepa, 15 miles east of here, where their Jeep convoy is waiting.

Joan Collins Weds Actor-Composer

Norwalk, Conn. — (AP) — British actor-composer Anthony Newley and London-born beauty Joan Collins were married Monday in a simple ceremony performed by a justice of the peace.

They were married by Peace Justice Michael Stempkoski after Probate Judge Alfred Santaniello issued a waiver of the normal four-day waiting period.

Newley, 31, and his 30-year-old bride motored back to New York City after the nuptials.

Newley was absent from his Broadway musical, "Stop the World, I Want to Get Off," Monday night and the audience was told that he was unable to appear because of "illness." He was co-author of the hit show.

The actor-composer was divorced from his previous wife, the former Ann Lynn, last April 26.

Miss Collins appeared on the London stage and in several British films before going to Hollywood and international movie fame nine years ago.

INDUSTRIALIST CONFERS WITH WEST GERMANS
Bonn, Germany — (AP) — Berthold Beitz, general manager of the Krupp industrial empire, conferred with West German officials today on his recent talks with Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev and other Communist leaders.

It was understood the Russians told Beitz they wanted to increase trade with West Germany. He reportedly replied there was some difficulty in finding markets for the goods the Communists want to export.

Parochial School Bus Bill Killed

Jefferson City, Mo. — (AP) — Catholic hopes for free school bus transportation for parochial students were stymied today by a legislative committee.

The House Constitutional Amendments committee voted, 6-5, Monday night to kill a resolution which would have called a vote of the people on the question. A constitutional amendment had been proposed to legalize the bus service for non-public school children.

Parents earlier this month staged massive protest enrollments from parochial to public schools. They hoped to show it was more economical for the state to provide free buses instead of the entire cost of elementary and high school education.

The Catholic parents indicated that unless free school buses were available in the fall, they would send their children to public schools instead of parochial institutions.

Negroes Fighting Racial Barriers Given Powerful Backing in High Court Ruling

Washington — (AP) — Negroes fighting city- and state-imposed racial barriers today had some powerful support — loud and clear — from the highest court in the land.

The Supreme Court's voice obviously was intended for school boards and all local governing bodies, as well as lower federal courts before which integration cases are heard.

The message was this: Individual rights guaranteed by the Constitution are not pie in the sky. A person is entitled to enjoy them today, not at some vague time in the future.

"The basic guarantees of our Constitution are warrants for the here and now, and unless there is an overwhelming compelling reason, they are to be promptly fulfilled," the court said.

The decision loomed as an important factor in the movement toward racial equality now spreading rapidly over the country.

The court reemphasized another important point: The constitutional rights of some cannot be denied simply because others don't like the idea.

Justice Arthur J. Goldberg, junior member of the court, did the talking for a unanimous bench Monday in a case involving recreation facilities in Memphis, Tenn.

None of the ideas in the opinion are new. Goldberg quoted one case in point 50 years old. The importance lay in the fact that the court felt obliged to reiterate them.

Memphis was desegregating its parks and playgrounds gradually, relying on the "deliberate speed" concept which the high court built into public school desegregation in 1955. The city said that slow motion was necessary to avoid racial disturbances.

Goldberg said not only did "deliberate speed" not apply to Memphis parks, but it very likely no longer applied to schools — or at least to the degree that it did in 1955.

First Anniversary of Plunge Finds List Comparatively Dull

New York — (AP) — Stocks marked the first anniversary of their historic plunge today with a comparatively dull though slightly higher price trend.

Prices finished firm but below their best levels of the day. On May 28 last year the market suffered its sharpest price break in the most hectic trading since the 1929 crash.

Electronics and sugars paced the advance with gains of a point or more spread evenly throughout both groups. IBM starred on the upside in the electronics while American Crystal Sugar set the pace in its section.

Steels were firm and motors, with the exception of Chrysler were fractions higher. Du Pont backtracked in the chemicals.
