Los Angeles - (UPI) - Richard Battles, who claimed he ran the 100 in 9.8 as a high school track star, won a race Monday but the police department won the meet.

Battles had just been arrested for burglary when he broke loose and darted away with three officers after him. But Battles' feet couldn't save him. He was captured under an apartment house where he had hidden.

High Court Split Over Admission of Recorded Testimony

Washington - (UPI) - The bribery conviction of a Massachusetts restaurant operator has caused the Supreme Court to split sharply over the admission in evidence of recorded conversations.

A six-man majority affirmed the conviction of German S. Lopez of North Falmouth for bribing an internal revenue agent, even though the agent was carrying a minifon recorder, which later was played in court.

Justice John M. Harlan said the Internal Revenue Service used the device "only to obtain the most reliable evidence possible in which the government's own agent was a participant and which that agent was fully entitled to disclose."

"The device was not planted by means of an unlawful physical invasion of Lopez' premises under circumstances which would violate the Fourth Amendment," Harlan said. The Fourth Amendment bars unreasonable searches and seizures.

"This case involves no 'eavesdropping' whatever in any proper sense of that term," Harlan added.

Takes Opposite View
Justice William J. Brennan Jr. took the opposite view for 26 pages. He said the only way to avoid situations like the one in the Lopez case was to keep your mouth shut all the time.

The Fourth Amendment was not designed to protect secrecy, Brennan said, but to enforce each individual's right to determine to whom he would communicate his thoughts.

The high court ruled in 1928 in a famous case that wiretapping did not constitute an unreasonable search.

This decision, according to Brennan, arose from the fact that "the framers of the Constitution had not been far-sighted enough to foresee the invention of the telephone."

Brennan and two colleagues - Justices William O. Douglas and Arthur J. Goldberg - said it is about time the 1928 ruling was cast aside. The course of the court's decisions has been "out-flanked" by technology, they said.

"If electronic surveillance by governments becomes sufficiently widespread, and there is little in prospect for checking it, the hazard that as a people we may become hag-ridden and furtive is not fantasy," the Brennan opinion said.

Hatfield Protests

Consumer Index Drop
Salem - (UPI) - Gov. Mark Hatfield Monday protested plans of the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics to discontinue its "consumer price index" for Portland.

Hatfield said the bureau has indicated it will discontinue the Portland index next year.

The governor said the information on Portland retail prices is important in labor negotiations, and is used by companies making industrial decisions.

Wilderness School Outlined by Bjerke at Chamber Roundtable

Future plans for a school designed to teach people how to survive "off the land" in a wilderness area were outlined by the school's founder and director at Monday noon luncheon of the Medford Chamber of Commerce Roundtable.

The director, Odd Bjerke, a native of Norway, said the staff for the school has already been selected and that applications are being received for the first session, which is scheduled for June 24. Fee for the 10-day training course is $115, and anyone over 14 years of age is eligible for enrollment. Information about the program may be received by writing to post office box 1181, Medford.

By way of illustrating the activities of the training session, Bjerke showed a color film taken of a survival trip made by a group of 20 persons last summer in the Three Sisters Wilderness area. Bjerke explained that a two-day school was held prior to departure for the uplands to offer "academic" instruction on some of the basics of outdoor existence and condition them mentally for the experience. During the interval, the trainees "ate well," Bjerke said, to prepare them "for the ordeal ahead."

"We turned down 75 applicants for the trip," he said. "This is not a boy's game." The speaker stressed the importance of "attitude" in outdoor survival, noting that it can often make the difference whether "one comes out alive or not."

He said two men failed on the trip last summer for "psychological" reasons and had to leave the group to return to civilization. "Virtually 'nothing' is taken along on the 7-day trip into the mountains. Bjerke said, except clothing and a survival kit containing a few basic essentials like fishhooks, knives, twine and a piece of foil with which to cook. No food was taken on the outing. A brightly colored parachute was included for use as the covering for a teepee.

"The first few days were the hardest," the speaker said, "because the men were reluctant to eat slugs, snails, snakes and fish-head soup. But they soon got used to eating what was available."

Members of the group were given instruction in a variety of activities, including building snares and traps, shelter construction, preservation of food, edible plants and animals and primitive cooking.

Values Change

Bjerke remarked how different a man's values become in the wilderness. "Out there, it's not what you own," he said, "but rather what you are that counts. In Medford, a $50 bill will buy a lot of groceries, but in the mountains you might be grateful to be able to light a fire with it."

On the fifth day, in the vicinity of the south Sister mountain, an airplane made a food drop containing chicken and ice cream. It was the only deviation from the "live-off-the-land" policy during the 10-day trip.

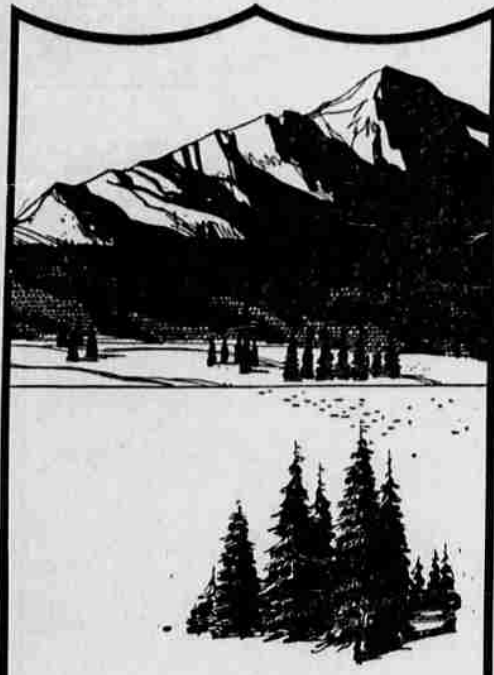

The scenery was spectacular and varied on the trip, he said. The party crossed three live glaciers, and encountered one "dead lake" that actually had icebergs floating in it. He described the area around Kidney lake as a "paradise" abounding with fish, grouse, rabbits and squirrels.

Selection of Medford

At the conclusion of his presentation, Bjerke was asked why Medford had been selected as the site for development of the Wilderness Survival school. He replied Medford was an ideal location because of its position between metropolitan areas to the north and south. He said the variety of flora and fauna, together with the abundance of lakes and streams in the high country, also make the location suitable. The climate, too, is good, he said.

The school this summer will feature a three-day academic period, followed by a seven-day outing in wilderness areas either around Marble mountain, or in the Trinity Alps in northern California.

Bjerke said he expects to have about 30 people in the field at one time. A medical doctor will go along on each outing, and there will be sufficient instructors to maintain a pupil-instructor ratio

IF A SIMPLE PIECE OF WIRE DOES IT BEST

Why clutter up your modern home with furnaces, flues, vents, fuel tanks, pipes?
Safest, cleanest, most worry-free... and every thing considered... the most economical...

If clean-as-light electric energy provides perfect, draft free comfort... why bring fire inside your home and with it fumes, odors, and messy flame by-products?

If you can install an electric heating system for less money... if an electric system requires almost no cleaning, maintenance, and repairs... why add these costs to your annual heating bill?
