Everest Climbers May Not Lose Toes Washington—(AP)—The danger that two U.S. Mt. Everest climbers, Barry Bishop and William F. Unsoeld, might face amputation of their frostbitten toes was lessened, it was reported here Wednesday. A spokesman for the National Geographic Society, a chief sponsor of the expedition, said latest information from Kaimandu was "there are no plans to operate." He said both men have regained feeling in their toes and "this is an encouraging sign."
