

DANGER TO SECURITY—Newton D. Glekel, left, a New York industrialist and philanthropist, warns that classroom shortages may be endangering the nation's security. Glekel, whose firm manufactures mobile classrooms, presents Wayne C. Reed, deputy commissioner of education, with a working model of such a classroom. He said that mobile classrooms can do much to alleviate the classroom shortage. (UPI)

Tetracycline Slows Growth of Bone in Unborn Children

By DELOS SMITH
UPI Science Editor

New York—When tetracycline enters a woman who is in the late stages of pregnancy, some of it gets deposited in the skeleton of her unborn child. And tetracycline in the skeleton of the newly born babe, especially one prematurely born, slows bone growth.

This is of sharp interest to medical science because tetracycline is among the most widely used of antibiotics. It is taken by mouth and kills a wide range of infecting bacteria, it has few side effects and none is serious if it is respected.

The three doctors who reported this to the medical profession said they had no evidence whatever that any babe had been harmed because its mother took tetracycline before it was born or because it received tetracycline after birth for a bacterial infection of its own.

The slowing of bone growth, measured in babies as well as in animals, is considerable but the growth pattern resumes its normal rate quickly when the tetracycline medication ceases, they said. On the other hand, any drug capable of crossing the "placental barrier" between pregnant women and unborn life is a drug to avoid if possible, they added.

Drs. Sidney Q. Cohan, Gertrude Bevelander and Teodulita Tiamisic of New York University Medical Center, New York City, made their report to a technical organ of the American Medical Association. They were not advising against the use of tetracycline in pregnant women who have infections that demand it, they said.

But "the physician of all disciplines has been repeatedly cautioned against the promiscuous use of drugs for vague indications," they continued. "During pregnancy the problem is compounded, and it would seem prudent to administer even well-known drugs only when absolutely indicated. The widespread use of newer preparations often with unproved effectiveness, for minor complaints is an unnecessary risk."

They did not mention thalidomide and its tragic consequences directly but that horror has focused medical science on drugs and pregnancy. The evidence that tetracycline enters the skeleton has been accumulating for some time in all parts of the world, they reminded.

Presence Unquestionable

The presence of the deposits are unquestionable because they are fluorescent under ultraviolet light. In the teeth of some young children who have had tetracycline ultraviolet light is not needed to reveal deposits because the teeth are visibly colored in ordinary light.

If this property of tetracycline was harmful in any way you'd think the harm would have shown up long before now, in view of the millions who have taken the antibiotic over the past 15 years, the doctors said. Yet it is a property which science does not understand and for that reason it must be kept in mind, particularly in pregnancy.

The scientists experimented with pregnant rats. Those which were given doses of tetracycline daily through the 10th and 15th days of pregnancy, gave birth to young which were 28 per cent smaller than the young of rats which had had no tetracycline. Such experiments are not possible in human beings, of course.
