Medford Woman Returns From Round-World Trip

Miss Marie Eicher, 18 Hawthorne avenue, has returned to Medford following a round-the-world cruise aboard the SS Monroe, passenger freighter of the American President Lines. Miss Eicher reports that 70 passengers were aboard the Monroe for the cruise. Among planned ship-board activities was an art show in which Miss Eicher entered several "Paintings" which were made with station and brown shoe polish on black paper. While she did not win a prize, the traveler explained that two persons asked for one painting so she had to paint another.

Cargo Interesting
Miss Eicher was particularly interested in the activities aboard ship concerning the loading and unloading of cargo which at various times during the cruise included pineapples, cashew nuts, rice, pepper, coffee, marble, oranges, and latex rubber, which passengers saw being collected from rubber trees at Singapore, then being readied for shipment.

Sailing from San Francisco in February, the ship first stopped at Honolulu en route to Japan. At Yokohama a group left the ship, returning to it at Kobe and spent eight days touring the country. A member of the ship's purser's office accompanied the groups on all side trips.

Miss Eicher explained that traffic conditions are so congested in Japan that it was dangerous to cross the street. She mentioned that bus drivers have an assistant, who tells them when to proceed.

At Takarazuka, Japan, the group attended theater performances which continue all afternoon. Two complete plays are given, she explained. The traveler commented about the quantity of small boats at Hong Kong, the good food, and extreme contrasts in living conditions. From there a group flew to Bangkok, touring the temples, the small shops and took a trip through the canals. Here, as in Cochinchina, India, the traveler commented on life along these congested waterways.

At Singapore the group returned to the ship and sailed to Malaya, where the travelers saw their first water buffalo working in a field. At Penang Miss Eicher commented about the Snake temple where numerous small green snakes abound.

Bombay Crowded
Young Indian dancing girls performed aboard ship when it docked at Cochin. At Bombay Miss Eicher explained they encountered the crowded streets on their trip, at times the car could move only a few feet at a time.

From there a group left the ship, flying to New Delhi; Agra, site of the Taj Mahal; Jaipur, and Amber, where the group had elephant rides. They rejoined the ship at Karachi, Pakistan.

From the Arabian sea sailed through the Gulf of Oman and the Red Sea. About this area Miss Eicher commented on the vast number of tankers that travel this route.

At Suez a group again left the ship traveling to Cairo where one of the highlights was touring the Cairo museum where the objects from the tomb of Tutankhamen are located. In addition to touring the pyramids and the Sphinx the group also took camel rides.

The train ride through the Valley of the Nile en route to Alexandria, Miss Eicher said reminded her of California with its similar green truck gardens and trees.

After sailing from there to Naples Miss Eicher again joined a group which spent eight days touring that country. Since Miss Eicher had previously visited this country she spent much of the time on walking tours of the larger cities. Among places visited were Villa D'Este, the country home of a former Pope on the outskirts of Rome.

Of particular interest during the trip to Naples was traveling at night through the Strait of Messina between Sicily and Italy.

Returning to the ship at Leghorn, they then sailed for New York City where Miss Eicher left the ship to return to Medford.
