Area Hospitals Endorse New Uniform Accounting System

The seven regional councils of the Oregon Association of Hospitals have endorsed a program setting forth a set of guiding principles and a uniform accounting system, which will become effective in this area July 1.

Announcement of endorsement by the Southern Hospital council, which includes the Medford and Ashland hospitals, was made locally by Sister Luke of The Saviour, and Bernard (Jack) Stormberg, Sacred Heart hospital; and Charles I. Gustafson, manager of Rogue Valley Memorial hospital.

The system, sponsored by the National Hospital association, and adopted by the Oregon Association of Hospitals, sets forth the principles of establishing hospital charges and a definition of standard hospital services. Purpose of the program is to assure high quality patient care and provide a standard system for computing hospital bills.
"Daily hospital service" will supplant "room rate" as a yardstick by which patients may measure their bills under the new system.
Under daily hospital service will be listed all the charges normally collected from all patients—rooms, linen service, meals, special diets, general nursing service, medical records and admitting service, use of ordinary hospital equipment and instruments, drugs and supplies. Or in simpler words, the three hospital representatives explained, daily hospital service will include all commonly used services and supplies provided in relatively equal quantities to each patient.

The hospital will furnish to each patient an accounting of his bill, regardless of the source of reimbursement to the hospital.

The local hospitals have cooperated in the past in working out an accounting system, but it will now be done on an organized basis.
Accepted Voluntarily
Under the new system, which is accepted voluntarily by the hospitals, they will be able to compare costs. The new system does not tend to increase the patient's total bill, the Medford hospital managers emphasized. It also does not set uniform rates nor establish charges.
C. F. Cole, Klamath Falls, president of the Southern Hospital council, has pointed out that hospital rates vary according to location, wage costs, size and other factors, and this condition will continue to exist.

Other hospitals included in the Southern Council are Southern Coos General hospital, Bandon; McAuley hospital, Coos Bay; Cottage Grove hospital, Cottage Grove; Josephine General hospital, Grants Pass; Myrtle Creek hospital, Myrtle Creek; Mass hospital, Myrtle Point; Keizer Memorial hospital, Inc., North Bend; Douglas Community hospital, Roseburg; and Mercy hospital, Roseburg; and Klamath Valley hospital, Klamath Falls.

system will be available to the public in hospitals subscribing to the plan, certificates will be displayed to show the hospital's membership.
In addition to general safeguards concerning the quality of service and protection given the patient, the code restricts duplication of facilities in other community hospitals when such duplication of facilities would increase the cost of care. Hospitals are charged with admitting persons regardless of race, creed or color. An acutely ill patient will not be subjected to delay in receiving care, and emergency patients will be given first aid immediately regardless of financial status.
The hospital's first obligation is to furnish care to the sick and injured, the guiding principles point out. Other hospital objectives listed are advancing scientific knowledge, furthering employee education and promoting community health.

Explaining The System
The three Jackson county hospitals, which have endorsed the guiding principles, are Sacred Heart and Rogue Valley in Medford; and Ashland Community hospital, Ashland.

Wife of An Alcoholic
I wish all men who are slipping into alcoholism could read the very sad letters that the wives of chronic alcoholics send me every so often.

afraid of him; often they don't dare move when he is around. When, to free them, I tell them to run by I did what I did; and then, in his anger, he is likely to go after me roughly.

Some of these women are eloquent in their description of the terrible torture that a woman and her children must endure while living with a man who, every so often, comes home much like a raging maniac—abusive, cruel and even dangerous. Often he strikes his wife and he beats up his children.
On my desk is a letter from a woman who says that for most of her married life, her husband has been an alcoholic and as a result, she and her children have gone through mental and physical agony. As she says, "Of course, there have been a few moments of happiness, but they never lasted long; I knew that soon he probably would be drunk, beating me and yelling at me, and tormenting the children."
"Sometimes, on returning from a drunken spree, he has kept us awake all night, preaching to us about some pet peeve he has, such as that the country is going to the dogs... if I open my mouth, or even if I don't, he is likely to pull me out of bed onto the floor. Sometimes I have to run and hide from him."
She says that she lost her love for him years ago. "The children have become terribly

Must Be 'Dried Out'
"Every so often he has to be put into a hospital so that he can be 'dried out'... He has just had three months of this. I don't think he'll ever stop drinking. I want to leave him, but many people say I should stay with him. My answer to them is that they never lived with an alcoholic, and hence have no idea of how awful the life is."
"What is remarkable, and against some present-day psychiatric theories, is that all of the children, who for so many years have lived in a hellish home, are doing well at school. They seem to be well-adjusted, and only one is moody and at times depressed. Fortunately, they are "taking after" their good mother.
Children who have grown up in such homes have told me that they now think their mother was unwise in sticking it out as long as she did; they feel usually that it would have been immensely easier on them if their mother had left with them, and had gone to make her living in a distant city.
In many of the cases in which the mother is forced to leave the man, she has to leave town and drop out of sight, because he has often assured her that if she ever left him he would follow and kill her—and he meant it.

Congratulations!
