Circuit Governor Is Fast Remedy Doctor

By JOSEPH VARILLA United Press International
Frankfort, Ky. — Gov. Bert Combs is one of those men who feel that modern day government has gotten too far away from the people.

While the group was still chatting with the governor, one of his aides called up the nearby Hazelwood tuberculosis hospital and made arrangements for the man to be admitted there.

He has visited the biggest city in the state—Louisville—and some of the smallest, including the little mining town of Haymond, where most of the residents are receiving relief checks.

The trips normally last one full day. He has made about 30 such trips so far. Some state capital was refer to the mobile government experiment as "Combs' government in exile."

Combs says the trips give him an excellent vehicle for discovering the sentiment of the electorate.

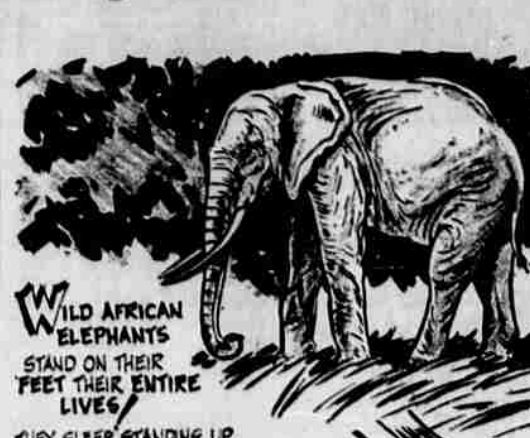

When he sets up shop in a town, the welcome mat is out to everyone who has a problem or who just wants to see a "real live governor."

The governor admitted it's difficult at times to refrain from immediately signing the necessary papers. Instead, he can only say the case will be looked into.

Wherever possible, action is sought the same day of the request.

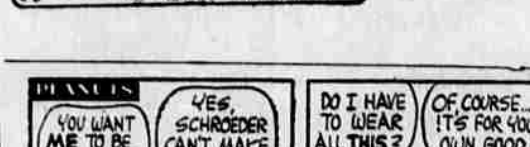

An example was when the family of Henry L. Ford asked the governor if the elderly man could be transferred from

Commission Urged To Test New Power

Portland — UPB — The Oregon Fish Commission was urged Wednesday to test its new powers of condemnation in order to build a fishway on the Lostine river in Wal-lowa county.

Boy Ayers, federal coordinator for the commission, said owners of two parcels of land have refused to grant access to a dam across the river near Lostine. He said it is blocking salmon and steelhead access to good spawning grounds and condemnation of a right-of-way may be the only way to reach it.

The 1963 legislature granted the commission the power of eminent domain.

The dam is the property of the Sheep Edge Ditch Co., an irrigation project. The company has authorized the fishway. Ayers said, but land owners have refused to grant an easement to reach the dam except at a price he considers excessive.

The commission expressed reluctance to use its new powers and instructed Ayers to continue negotiations.

PAST RETIREMENT Springfield, Mass. — UPB — At 85, Leroy W. Kellogg works a 48-hour week as a steam engineer at the city's pumping station at Ludlow reservoir.

"Age doesn't bother me," says Kellogg, who has no thought of retiring.

PLANS APPROVED—Approval of plans for the interior of the new home for the Metropolitan Opera Company being constructed at Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts in New York has been announced. The new house will contain essentially the horseshoe shape of the old theater. The new "Met" will seat 3,765 and have room for 164 standees, against 3,625 seats and 224 standees for the old. Shown above is a scale model of the new building. (UPI)
