The Medical Roundup

by Walter Tolson Emeritus Consultant in Medicine Mayo Clinic Emeritus Professor of Medicine Mayo Clinic (Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1963)

Dr. J. W. Henderson of the Mayo Clinic, in which he says that the best thing an eye surgeon can do is to shorten the levator muscle that pulls up the upper lid. I will not discuss the operative problems because they are highly technical.

In those many cases in which a child is born with the drooping upper lids, it is well to operate the year before the youngster goes to school. It is not advisable to operate on small children, because their tissues are too thin.

If I had such a trouble, I would first go to an excellent neurologist who could tell me whether I had an injury to some nerves, and what that injury was probably due to.

Several local men and women were among the thousands of students who were graduated from colleges and universities throughout the United States this month.
