Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

MARTHA RAYE was dining in Chicago's Pump Room one evening when a waiter hustled by with a serving of shish-kebab (lamb held aloft on a flaming sword—a specialty of the house.) "What the heck is that?" inquired Miss Raye. Jimmy Durante, sitting next to her, explained, "A customer who left only a $10 tip."

In a fascinating book called "The Fine Art of Literary Mayhem," Myrick Land describes a variety of bitter feuds and vendettas in which world-famous authors climbed down from their ivory towers and exchanged insults that left everybody concerned gasping for breath.

The great historian, Thomas Carlyle, for instance, dismissed none other than Ralph Waldo Emerson as a "Hoary-headed and toothless baboon." Henry James, rallying to Emerson's defense, deprecated Carlyle as "that same old sausage, fizzing and sputtering in his own grease." Most vitriolic of all was George Bernard Shaw, ready always to take on all comers. He once infuriated Henry Arthur Jones, reigning London playwright of his day, with such a string of insults that Jones counter-attacked Shaw in a public letter beginning, "The Nag Sedition was your mother and Perversity begot you; Mischief was your midwife, and Misrule your nurse!"
