Josephine County Board Asks for Building Code

Grants Pass–The Josephine county board of commissioners has recommended that the county planning commission set up a building code for the county's rural areas. The proposed code would go into effect July 1, 1964.

In a letter presented recently to the planning commission, the board emphasized the code would apply "only to those structures which are intended to be used as permanent homes, hotels, motels, eating and meeting places used by the public, and would include churches, auditoriums and theaters."

County Planning Officer Virgil Adams said this indicated that the new restrictions would not apply to other buildings such as farm structures, summer homes, commercial and industrial properties not used by the public, or forestry or logging structures.

The board expressed the belief that the health, safety and general welfare of Josephine county would be better protected by the setting up of a rural building code. It was indicated that a proposed county building inspector might also handle septic tank and drain field installation inspections in keeping with state regulations, thus giving the county sanitarian more time for matters of general health throughout the county.
