

KIMMY SAYS—

Editor's note: This column is written by a Medford teen ager who has chosen the nom de plume of "Kimmy." Other teen agers in the area—and, who knows, perhaps even parents baffled at their offspring's behavior—are invited to write to "Kimmy," in care of the Mail Tribune, for suggestions or advice on manners, dress, behavior and similar subjects.

Dear Kimmy: My boy friend went away this summer to work. How can I meet more boys?

Lonesome: That really shouldn't be too hard to do if you're like all other girls. Get out and play tennis, go swimming in public pools, go water-skiing, and go to the beach. Go where ever people are! Surely, someone in the crowd will notice you. Stay calm, cool, and collected, and you'll have a ball. Good luck and snatch a cute one! Kim-

Dear Kimmy: When ever my b. f. comes over to see me, my little brother is always following us where ever we go. Please tell me how I can get rid of him.

One Too Many: I can see where you do have a problem, but don't try to get rid of little brother completely. Maybe your b. f. likes your little brother. Ever think about that? Boys like a little brother around to show you how manly they are when it comes to fixing little brother's bicycle, or helping him make that model airplane just the way he wants it.

As far as getting rid of him, try talking to your mom about it. It might work too if you would talk to your brother, in a real sweet way. He may seem stupid and a brat at times, but a little talk with him from big sister helps a lot.

You may have been a little sister to your older brother or sister and the same problem undoubtedly arose with them. Find out what they did as a solution. A little sweet talk and maybe a promise to bake a big chocolate cake is just the ticket to "minus one brother"! Good luck. Kim-

Dear Kimmy: Should Junior High girls be allowed to wear nylons to school?

Mother of a Junior High Girl: Dear Mother of a J.H. girl: I refuse to answer that question on the grounds that it may incriminate me. I can't give a definite "yes" or "no". I can say though, that this can become an expensive habit. If a girl goes through two or three pairs a week, I would say that she should be more responsible, and pay for them or at least a part of them. You are dressed like a lady in nylons and you must act like a lady in them. No baseball playing or chasing all over school. Making her pay for them will teach her to take a little more care of them. In answer to your question I would say it is up to you and the girl's father. Kim-

Dear Kimmy: My hair looks like a teased hay stack in the summer. It is real dry and the ends are all broken off. How can I keep it looking soft and shiny?

Summer Gal: Dear Summer Gal: This is a problem that is shared by many other girls. The sun, water, and wind all mixed together is the beginning of your problem.

Keep your hair covered part of the day, if you're planning an all-day beach party. It also helps to put on a cream rinse after your shampoo. The best answer, which your mother has undoubtedly told you, is brush, brush, brush. Every morning and every night; 100 strokes. Really use your arm muscles. If you find it next to impossible to do this twice a day, insist on at least 100 strokes daily. Remember if none of this works, there is always that "greasy kid's stuff"! Kim-

Dear Kimmy: I am only 5 years old, but I don't think I am too young to write to you. I am going to get a new puppy and I want you to help me name him.

Salli: Dear Salli: Of course you are not too young to write to me. I feel very privileged that you want me to help name him. I sure hope he is going to be a him, because of the names I will give you.

When you get your puppy look for some characteristic on him. If he is real lively name him Frisky. If he has curly hair name him Curly. You can always go by the color. Blacky, Black Sambo, Spotty, or Sno-Ball. You can name him "People" names if you want. These are just about all the suggestions I can give to you, without simply listing name after name. Write to me and tell me what you finally named him. Kim-
