IT'S YOUR LAW

Respect for Law Makes Democracy Live

CREDIT CARDS

Modern retail business makes great use of credit. Much of this is extended on charge accounts through the use of credit cards or charge-plates. Look in your billfold or purse and chances are you will find one or more credit cards for gasoline, restaurants, retail stores, or other charge accounts, and even a telephone credit card.

These credit cards are very convenient. They establish your identity for the purpose of charging the purchase. This means you can carry less cash, and that you receive a bill at the end of the month. For people who must keep careful records, as for tax purposes, the record of gasoline and car expense charges is helpful.

Can Spell Trouble

But beware! Your credit card can spell trouble if it falls into the wrong hands through loss or theft. If you read the fine print on the card or on the application you sign to get it, you will realize how much responsibility for charges you have assumed.

Most important, if you lose a credit card, report the loss immediately by telephone or telegram to the company that issued it. Follow this up with a letter. This will relieve you of responsibility for charges run up on your card after the loss is reported.

Generally, credit card companies do not seek to make card holders pay such charges as are made before they are notified of the card being lost or stolen, but they can do so under the terms on which the card usually is issued.

Most credit cards require

Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a woman's editor, and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors. (Copyright 1962—General Features Corp.)

Jack U.—My mother's plot is for her own children, no strangers.

Ella B.—I had a right to have my best friend buried there.

Jack U.—My grandmother left my mother a burial plot for my mother's children. When my mother died she made it clear that any of her six children who needed burial space were entitled to use it. My sister Ella lives near the cemetery, so she trimmed the grass, kept the plot clean, and came to feel herself in charge of it. We've just learned she had her common-law husband buried there last month. We want him moved.

Ella B.—I had no choice about a resting place for my beloved common-law husband.

I couldn't locate his children and I couldn't afford to buy a new plot. This may not mean anything to my brother, but he was everything to me. He couldn't marry me, but he was faithful to me for the 18 years we were together, and he supported me when I couldn't work. He was a man any family could be proud of. He belongs with me.

The Council: The only way to resolve this dispute is to go back to the mother's intent. She wanted to bequeath "peace of mind" to her children, so far as a final resting place was concerned. Some would need this aid; others might plan to use plots of the families they married into. What Jack is really saying here is, "I don't want to lie near that fellow." And Ella counters, "I loved him. He was my virtual husband. As such, he has a right to be where he is." Our say? It depends upon size. If there's room for Jack, Ella, and the other "entitled" siblings, then leave Ella's soulmate where he is. But if it's a toss-up between Jack and the present incumbent, well, Jack gets it. No two objects can occupy the same space, says a basic law of life—and even of death, we see here. Family feuding on this sad topic must give way to family feeling about the spirit, not just the letter, of the bequest.

POODLE HELPS ROBBER

London (AP)—A bandit made a successful getaway in his car Wednesday with $100 from a suburban London bank, thanks to a dog. Passers-by, who could have cut him off from his auto, thought the men chasing the robber were after a poodle frolicking at his heels and grabbed the dog instead.

Grange News

Jackson County Pomona

The Jackson County Pomona Grange met in regular session at Central Point Grange hall with Master Melvin Lettie, presiding and 118 members present.

Some 37 candidates were initiated in the fifth degree from Central Point, Live Oak, Sams Valley, Shady Cove, Upper Applegate, Bellview, Phoenix and Roxy Ann Granges.

Three members were received by demit. One from California and two from Coos county.

The new members were welcomed by the master, who reminded them that they receive benefit from the organization in direct proportion to the service they render.

It was announced by Delmar Smith that the Pomona Grange will have a booth at the state fair again this year, and asked that anyone having produce notify the committee.

Ernest Radomske, legislative chairman, announced that the legislature was still in session and that the new constitution is still under consideration.

There was considerable discussion of the sudden rise in the price of sugar when there is no real shortage. It was decided to write our Senator and Congressman asking that something be done to reduce the price to its regular amount. Roscoe Roberts reminded the members that the State Grange meets in Oregon City from June 10 to 14. The meeting closed with refreshments served.

National Forest Completes Tree Planting Season

Tree planting on the Rogue River National Forest, which started in late October, was completed for the season on June 7 according to Forest Supervisor C. E. Brown.

During that period nearly two million trees were received from three forest nurseries of the northwest. More than 1½ million trees were field planted on 3,000 acres of the five ranger districts of the forest. The remaining trees were transplanted at the Sturgis Transplant bed.

In addition, nearly 250 pounds of tree seed were used to seed more than 500 acres. Most of this reforested acreage was on recently cut clear-cut patches, although 800 acres were made up of several 50-75 year old burns that had been previously cleared of brush.

Present plans are to restore 10,000 acres of old burns to forest tree production. Only the best timber growing sites are being cleared and planted at this time because of the relatively high costs.

Prepared Site
At the Sturgis Guard station on the Applegate district 250,000 nursery-grown trees have been transplanted. These trees were planted on a specially prepared site.

It is hoped that this procedure will develop a more rugged, sturdier tree for local conditions to plant some of the most severe sites. This operation is being viewed with considerable interest, according to Supervisor Brown. If this initial operation proves successful, it is planned to expand this transplant bed and to consider the development of one or two more transplant beds on the forest.

Early Newspapers Vary in Values
Georgetown, Calif. (UPI)—Early newspapers are the most expensive and the least expensive items listed in the third catalogue of western Americana, just issued by the Talcott Press here.

An issue of the Monterey Californian, first newspaper in the state, is listed at $500. An 1896 issue of the Humboldt Times of Eureka, an 1867 issue of the Marysville Daily Appeal or an 1896 issue of the Mountain Democrat of Placerville are available at $3 each.

SUPERHIGHWAY TIP

Chicago (UPI)—Drivers should enter expressways at the speed of traffic, says the Chicago Motor club. Motorists also should keep pace with expressway traffic; change lanes only when necessary, taking care to check traffic in front and behind; and look carefully to the rear before slowing down to leave the expressway.

caly collected tree seed. This several-year supply of seed is needed to carry the forest over the lean years when no seed crop is available from some tree species.

Ponderosa pine, for example, in this area produces a good to heavy cone crop on an average, but once in seven years. The true firs, Douglass-fir, and the five-needled pines normally produce good seed crops at least every three to four years. At least a five-year supply of all species is desired to provide an orderly planting and seeding program of the seven major tree species regenerated in this area.

Seed from the forest is used to grow trees to replant or to seed freshly logged areas. More vigorous trees can be grown when seed sources are from the same area and elevation as the area to be planted.

Glen Tye Graduates From Machine Course

Glen E. Tye, Medford, was one of 97 students who were graduated June 10, from Eugene Technical-Vocational school.

Tye, a 1961 graduate of Medford High school, took the two-year machine shop and welding courses.
