Kennedy Handed Antitrust Victory

Washington—(UPI)— The Supreme Court has handed the Kennedy administration its biggest antitrust victory—a means of stemming the recent wave of bank mergers.

In a landslide of opinions and orders ending the 1962-63 term, the court Monday approved the use of a 1950 amendment to the Clayton antitrust law in application to to a bank merger.

The statute outlaws acquisitions "where in any line of commerce in any section of the country, the effect . . . may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create monopoly." Because of the wording of the law, the "acquisitions" can be bank stock only, not assets.

The 5-3 ruling strengthens the government's hand in cases already in court.

39 States Found To Have Schools With Religious Program

Washington —(UPI)— Religious exercises are permitted as part of the school program in 39 states, according to a survey presented to the Supreme Court.

In an 8 to 1 ruling Monday, the Supreme Court decided that prayers and Bible reading in the public schools is unconstitutional.

The usual pattern in these cases is to open each school day with a homeroom devotional service which includes the reading of a passage from the Bible, and recitation of the Lord's Prayer.

This custom is much more prevalent in the South and East, where it has existed since the early days of the Republic, than it is in the more recently settled sections, such as the Far West.

According to a survey given the court by Maryland, opening devotions are forbidden by law, state constitution or judicial decision in seven states. They are Alaska, California, Illinois, Nebraska, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Missouri law is silent but the practice is not adhered to there. The Arizona constitution bars sectarian instructions and religious exercises are rarely held there or in Montana.

The survey produced no information from Nevada, nor did it show what New York has done since the court's decision of last June.

The most comprehensive study of actual practices in U.S. public schools was published last year by Dr. Richard B. Dierenfield, associate professor of education at MacAlester College, St. Paul, Minn. He polled school superintendents in a nationwide sampling of 4,000 communities.

School Officials Reply

Thirty-three per cent of the superintendents said that homeroom devotional services were held in all schools of their system. An additional 17 per cent said such services were held in some schools of their community.

Regional variations were striking. In the South, 88 per cent of the superintendents reported home-room devotional exercises in all or some of the schools under their jurisdiction. In the East, 80 per cent reported such exercises. But only 25 per cent of the superintendents in the Midwest and 9 per cent of those in the Far West did so.

In reply to a specific question, 42 per cent of the school superintendents said Bible reading was conducted in their schools. There was a high correlation between these replies and those concerning home-room exercises, suggesting that Bible reading normally is part of an opening "religious program" which usually includes prayer and possibly the singing of a hymn.
