

Welfare Training Program Subject Of Discussion

The Jackson county court this morning discussed the new welfare training program for aid to dependent children mothers, but reached no decision on how the program should be carried out.

County Judge Earl M. Miller and County Commissioner Edwin Taylor voted in favor of the program at the recent county welfare commission meeting as did the other commission members. County Commissioner Don Faber opposed the program and stated it would be a problem for the county to set the salaries for such a job.

The training program, new to this county starting about July 1, would provide six months of part-time training for ADC mothers who have no job in sight and do not plan to be remarried in the near future.

Start of the program awaits confirmation in a letter to the state welfare commission from the county court and further job description.

Tentative plans call for clerical positions at the county dog pound, county surplus food center and the Public Library of Medford and Jackson County. The county would provide industrial accident insurance for the five or six employees to be trained in the positions, and the welfare commission would provide the salaries.

Trainers would be selected by the welfare department caseworkers and must have school-age children or babysitters for pre-school age children, it was explained.

Decathlon Entries Received

Corvallis, Ore.—(UPI)—Meet director Sam Bell said today that 19 entries had been received for the National A.A.U. Decathlon meet to be held Friday and Saturday.

He said that last Saturday was the mailing deadline, but that he would accept any entry postmarked then that came in the mail in the next day or two.

Bell was especially hoping still to hear from Phil Mulkey, former Memphis State cinder star and one of the United States' best in the tiring 10-event test.

The withdrawal of world record holder C. K. Yang in order to tour Europe with a nationalist Chinese team has turned the competition into a wide-open scramble but four names seemed to loom above the rest.

The Four: There was Paul Herman, 1961 title holder with a high of 8061 points; Steve Pauly with a best of 7226 and the advantage of competing on his own track; Dave Edstrom, Kansas Relay's Decathlon king this year with a high of 8176; and Mulkey, who piled up 8709 points in 1961.

Not only is the national title at stake here, but the top two finishers will earn the coveted trip to Europe and the chance to compete in the forthcoming U. S.-USSR track meet.

Friday's events include the 100 meters, broad jump, shot put, high jump and 400 meters. Saturday will see the pole vault, 110-meter high hurdles, discus, javelin and 1500 meters.

The meet will be scored according to traditional point-counting methods, despite impending moves by the International Amateur Athletic Federation to revise scoring tables downward. The totals can then be changed if the federation acts officially.

who also failed to appear and were suspended, have not been reinstated.

Gorky requested reinstatement, pointing out that he has a good record for keeping his dates for matches, has reimbursed Promoter Elton Owen for his share of an agreed amount for losses incurred when the card was cancelled, and desired to "square himself" with the Medford wrestling fans.

The big Russian, known as the Siberian Wolf Killer, will be one of seven men in an over-the-top battle royal at the Medford armory Thursday night. The free-for-all will feature Haystack Calhoun, who at 601 pounds is the world's biggest wrestler. Others in the gang fight will be Abe Jacobs, Catalina George Drake, Andre Drappe, Ivan "Killer" Kameroff and Coast Junior Heavyweight Champion Rocky Columbo.

Three regulation matches will precede the battle royal with the first one going to the canvas at 8:30 p.m. Reserved seat tickets are available at Lampport's Sporting Goods store in Medford.

Roles of Cummins, Boyle With Power Company Are Reviewed

(Continued from Page 1) The role of Cummins in the development of the California Power company, of which he was president from 1941 until its merger into PP&L, was to provide the executive direction to the financial affairs of the company at a period when it was to experience its greatest growth in southern Oregon.

Cummins had previously been associated with Standard Gas and Electric company, from 1937 and before that with the H. M. Byllesby company, both Chicago-based firms that had extensive utility properties which it had developed in Oregon and elsewhere.

Cummins served Copco as a director as well as its president, and since June two years ago has been a vice chairman of the board of directors of Pacific Power.

Among the developments was design and construction of the seven-project plan for the North Umpqua after World War II; the early planning and development of the projects that make up the Upper Klamath Lake development for irrigation and power production; the first intertie between Copco and Pacific Gas and Electric to the south and the large capacity circuits of the present system.

Largely as a result of his work on the Klamath basin, he was named Klamath Division manager in 1921 and served there until 1929, when he became assistant general manager for the company and moved to Medford. He subsequently was named vice president in charge of operations and in 1941 was named vice president and general manager and chief engineer, and, in 1956, a director.

In 1951 Boyle received the Certificate of Merit from the Professional Engineers of Oregon for his notable achievement in developing hydro power resources of the region. In the years in which he has resided in Medford, Boyle has been active in many service and civic affairs.
