Woods, Water, Wildlife

By Hank DeVoss

Diamond Lake—Has been slow or fast depending on the weather. Fly fishing ought to be good whenever the water is calm early or late.

Fish Lake—Has been slow with most of the action going to the stillfishermen. The biggest this week was a 17 inch.

Four-Mile Lake—Has been putting out some fair fishing with rainbow, brook, and kokanee available to all.

Howard Prairie—Has been giving up some fair catches during the evening fly hatches. Midday luck picks up a bit when lures are found that fit the weather and the fish's temperament.

Hvatt Lake—Trout and stillfishermen have to work hard to pick up a couple of the beauties that swim in this lake. Fly fishing early and late with confidence in the pattern will bring in fish. Try a woolly worm.

Lemolo Lake—Is reported to be good for brown trout at the inlet. A trolled flatfish or cast blue upright fly will do the job.

Willow Lake—Will give up fish if you will dredge the bottom and stay with it. The Kokanee are getting fatter and tastier by the week. Try a woolly worm.
