Tablets

By R. E. NEALON

Mail Tribune Table Rock Correspondent

The tragic death of Lawrence Hull Wednesday cast a pall of gloom over our little community, where he was born and grew up. Larry, as he was known to his friends, attended the Table Rock school when a young lad, later working with his father, where he learned the orchard business. Taking over the Red Skin and Table Rock Orchards after the death of his father, the late Elmer Hull, Larry not only proved himself a capable orchard man, but a considerate, and kindly person with his workmen. He was loyal to his community, which he loved so much he disliked having anything published that might reflect unfavorably on the welfare and integrity of the area. A good neighbor. He was always willing to cooperate in any move that would be a help to his adjoining neighbors. We join with many others in extending our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

This accident, which is the second involving a logging truck in the same place in a year's time, has caused much talk and expressing of opinions. Some say this curve needs to be worked over, as it is unsafe in its present condition. Others believe we should have speed limits and that trucks and cars drive too fast over the straightaway approaching this curve. Some time ago our local ladies got out petitions asking that speed limits be established here and the proper signs be posted. We understand that a man was sent out here to check speeds. Also we are told that the man sat in his car at one side of the road, but in plain sight of those driving on the road. Of course he didn't see any violators as the fact that he was there soon was known from one end of the straightaway to the other.

An average daily attendance of 22 youngsters was reported at the vacation Bible school at the schoolhouse here. A program reviewing the work done will be given Tuesday night at the schoolhouse.

Beginning this date, the Table Rock store will be open seven days a week until Oct. 1, Mrs. Johns Thomas announced.

At the meeting of Mail Tribune correspondents held Monday, at the Twitchell home, there were only two men present. The rest were all women who are credited with doing the most talking and must do the lion's share of spreading the news by the written word. It was an interesting meeting, conducted by Cleve Twitchell, M. T. regional editor, and we learned many things, although what you can't teach an old dog new tricks. Perhaps what we learned may show up in future Tablets. At present, we are limited to time and space. However, we were served with delicious cake, coffee and punch. The treats were on the house, and the house belonged to Cleve and his wife.

Lena Rasmussen Now Has 100 Great Grandchildren

By KATHERINE HARRELL
Mail Tribune Correspondent
Jacksonville - Lena Rasmussen, 84, of 401 Sixth st., widow of R. S. Rasmussen, is truly a grandmother "extraordinaire."

Twenty-five of her grandchildren reside in Oregon. The rest are in North Dakota, Minnesota, Montana, California and New Mexico.

Development of Jacksonville Area Is Discussed

Jacksonville - Nine people attended the meeting of the Jacksonville Boosters' club government committee in the Jacksonville library last night, some of them present and past local government officials.

Boosters' club president Robertson Collins opened the meeting with a brief explanation of the community development program. It is not a probing thing, he said. Purpose of the committee will be to determine if the present local government structure is adequate and how it functions.

Discussion during the committee's first meeting last night revealed that Jacksonville may need a city manager when the administrative load resulting from the new sewer, when completed, becomes too much for the present city administration.

The sewer will cause several outlying portions of the Jacksonville community to annex to the town, it was predicted. The most desirable areas for annexation were mentioned as north and south Stage rd.

It was decided to write to the League of Oregon Cities for a digest of new state legislation affecting cities. The city attorney will be consulted as to questions on the city charter and ordinances.

Next committee meeting will be at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, July 11. City council members, mayor and any interested person is invited to attend any of the weekly meetings, the committee said.
