Local Artists May Exhibit In Eugene

All western artists are invited to exhibit paintings in the sixth Artists Showcase, a semi-annual exhibit to be held in the King Cole room of the Eugene hotel, Eugene, July 4 through 7.. Entry deadline is July 3 at 7 p.m.

Only original and current work will be accepted, copies will nullify awards, and entries are not to exceed 1,200 square inches including mat or frame, according to an announcement of the event. Entries will be limited to three per artist, with a three dollar fee for each entry. All proceeds from entry fees are applied toward prize money and cost of exhibit, it is explained Cash and ribbon awards will be given.

All pictures in the exhibit are to be for sale. The public is invited without charge.

A prize winners' show is to be held for a week following the Artists Showcase.

Judges will be Hamilton Aaris, Portland; Alan Munro, Oregon State university, Corvallis; and Joe Stuart, University of Oregon, Eugene.

Further information may be obtained from Artists Showcase, Box 464, Eugene, Ore.

In Ashland

Ashland – Visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Bartelt, 1160 Fern street, are their son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bartelt, and their three children from Walnut Creek, Calif.

California Visitors

Hornbrook – Visitors last week at the A. A. Protsman home were Mrs. Herman Goodman, Oakland, Calif., and her granddaughters, Diana and Terry Allen, San Lorenzo, Calif. Mrs. Protsman and her guests spent one day in Ashland where they called on Mrs. Ernest Hamby, and in Medford they visited Mrs. Mildred Wiley.

Hospital Expands Junior Guild

An expanded program for the Junior guild of Sacred Heart hospital is being worked out under the direction of Sister Theresa Louise, hospital advisor for the guild members, and Mrs. Richard H. Byrns, RN, instructor for the program. As part of this expansion, a new orientation course has been compiled and 20 members recently completed the course and were honored at a tea given in the conference room at the hospital.

About half of the class has been on duty at the hospital for some time and the remainder are new members.

Twenty Members

Twenty members make up the guild, and an additional group may be recruited in the near future. Present members are Robin Ashenberner, Annette Burich, Judy David, Ann Depner, Janne Clarke, Alice Doyle, Claudia Edson, Pamela Green, Mary Kay Hockstatter, Joyce Jarmin, Faye Lewis, Janette Paulsen, Sue Root, Mary Ross, Annette Sakraida, Pamela Stevens, Eva Wininger, Lyn Hylton, Jeanne Allen and ShawnLee Hawks.

The membership is not limited to Catholics, and several of the present list are Protestants.

The Junior guild program serves not only to ease the burden of hospital work on the registered and practical nurses, but provides an opportunity for the young women to receive valuable training; in some instances this training shows the way to careers in the medical, nursing and technical fields associated with hospitals and care of the sick.

The work is entirely on a volunteer basis. All candidates are interviewed by Sister Theresa Louise, and are carefully screened before being accepted for training. When the orientation course is completed, the young women are trained in those hospital procedures which they are able to do as volunteers.

Sign Pledge

Members of the guild have drafted by-laws, sign a volunteer pledge written by the members themselves, and are indoctrinated in hospital ethics. The members may begin when they are almost 16, and 18 is the maximum age.

The young women work in both the central and admission offices, in the laboratory, they assist the nurses with patient care, help Providence guild members in the chest x-ray clinic, make beds, help with baths and perform other duties. Supervision of their work is said to be close and strict. Members work as many hours as they are able, with many finding it possible to spend more time at the hospital during vacation from school. They wear white blouses, skirts and pinafores.

Their assignments for each period of service are made by the Sister in charge; if a member cannot be at the hospital for her hours of duty, she must find a replacement.

When each member has completed 500 hours, she receives a small cap to wear as a badge of her service.

Adopt Project

In addition to their service to the hospital staff and patients, the Junior guild members have now adopted a project. The hospital needs a new "Miss Chase." Miss Chase, it should be explained, is a manikin utilized in the training of some of the hospital personnel and because of her age and condition, she needs to be retired and replaced. The Miss Chases come high, it seems, and the guild members need about $250. One plan to earn money is the making and selling of a doll wardrobe and this will be completed at a dance slated for October 6 when Wayne King's orchestra will play here. Food sales and other projects are also planned.

POTPOURRI

Anything labeled "Royal" with a capital "R" should be the best, and in the case of The Royal Ballet from England, it is. Along with other balletomanes from all over the Pacific Northwest, Potpourri traveled to Portland this week to see a performance of this royal troupe. We attended Wednesday night, and it was, indeed, a "Royal" evening.

Our enjoyment of the trip and the evening was heightened by the fact that we went in the company of the Harold Thurstons. Both Mr. and Mrs. Thurston have studied, performed and taught ballet and when they talk about ballet, it is with authority.

All three of us mourned the fact that we had not been able to attend all three evenings, or that we had not been privileged to see "Giselle" or "Swan Lake", those classics which are traditionally performed by all good companies. We were further upset to learn that the fabulous Margo Fonteyn had performed Monday, and did not appear either Tuesday or Wednesday. (We still believe that when a great company goes on tour, and the fans travel such distances to attend programs that somehow it could be arranged for the stars to do at least one small number each evening, since it is not possible for them to dance a major role each night.)

However, we did see a superlative company perform new ballets which just might become classics in time. At least one, "The Invitation" is contemporary in spirit and it was danced and played so magnificently that the audience was deeply moved.

And we did see the young, controversial Russian dancer, Rudolf Nureyev, perform. He is a disturbing artist, this 24-year-old man who defected from the Russian troupe of which he was a member (finding the opportunity in Paris about a year and a half ago) and who for the past several months has been appearing with the Royal Ballet as a guest star. In Paris and London he was "the object of hysterical adulation," we read in one review.

After his performance Wednesday night in the Don Quixote Pas de Deux, danced with the lovely and accomplished Nadia Nerina, the Portland audience applauded stirringly for minutes on end. We applauded along with the rest, and did a little calling of "more" like most everyone sitting in our section. But at the same time we resented this arrogant youngster whose very presence shouts voicelessly all the time "look at me; see how wonderful I am. I dare you not to watch and be convinced that I am the best dancer in the world." So, because he is young and guilty of excesses on stage that some feel are almost beyond endurance, we were both inspired and annoyed; we would like to have boxed his ears soundly and sent him to bed without any supper.

The Thurstons applauded warmly along with the others, but were also critical. Nureyev, who is being compared to that greatest-of-all time, Nijinsky, is capable of astounding leaps and elevation, but Harold and Margene Thurston decided that for sheer perfection of technique Donald Macleary, David Blair and others in the company were as good. They do not electrify the audiences as the Russian dancer does but the teacher trained in ballet sees small flaws and imperfections of balance and line not apparent to others.

The British dancers — save the Russian — perform compatibly as a troupe and the costuming is the most beautiful, the most imaginative and the most artistic that we can remember. Too, the orchestra is excellent and its supporting music, particularly for "The Invitation" was little short of brilliant Wednesday night.

For the opening number, "Le Fete Etrange," there was an innovation which the three of us liked very much. A soprano with a fine, sure voice, added a vocal accompaniment to the instrumental work of the orchestra.

* * * * *

While Mrs. Thurston and Potpourri took a quick trip down to the business district Wednesday afternoon, Mr. T. took off for the auditorium to prowl a bit backstage. He came back saying that the best news he had heard was that Portland is planning a new structure with adequate space and stages for such productions as a Royal ballet performance. This is truly good news for the old auditorium is a grim place and the acoustics are less than adequate. O.S.

Claims American Women Paradox

Chicago – (UPI) – County Kelly Hockmeyer, Irish - born authority on women, says the American woman is the most dynamic creature in the world today – but a paradox!

In his words – "She knows how to give herself a home permanent but not how to make homemade soups. She takes care of an office job as well as her home and family, but she complains that she's really not expressing herself completely. She's willing to support her husband, raise his children, and take care of his home, but she believes any authority who tells her that the American woman is a poor wife."

Children Visit Grandparents

Hornbrook – Ardis and Lori Clyburn of Spokane, Wash., are visiting their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Clyburn, while their mother, Mrs. Arlie Clyburn, is in Oakland, Calif., with her mother and sister.

Veni-Vidi

By MARGARET SCHULER

"Arrividerci Roma" – good bye. "Veni-Vidi," I came, I saw, and now, "Io vado." I go.

It is lovely, early morning in June, and I come for one last trip, to walk up the Via Veneto. I pass the hundreds of little empty tables, the gay, elegant shop windows, and come to the three arches of the Pinciogate. Nostalgically, I see the picture visita of the umbrella pines.

I go through the gate of the old wall, conscious as always I am, of its imperturbability, and imperviousness, to seething, scandalous progress. And I come to the Borghese gardens.

Excepting for the milling, re less swallows overhead and the happily undisturbed singing birds in the trees, excepting for the swish of the limp faggot brooms of the street sweepers collecting yesterday's devastation into little piles, the gardens are mine alone. The sun streaks down, with the morning peach tint, indigenous to Rome, through the trees, over the white marble fountains and statues, and the flowers.

At this hour only, is the glory that was Rome. At all other hours there is now, too, too much, and too, too many.

Routine Begins

Even as I walk back, trucks buses, and automobiles are on their busy ways. Flower stalls are being filled and arranged into pictures of riotous color; magazines and daily papers are being piled onto the corner kiosks; and white-coated waiters sprinkle the hanging flower and plant baskets. Another routine day is beginning.

In two more hours no one can enjoy the beflowered boulevard. Only Cinzano, Coca-Cola and Nestles' signs will stand high enough above the traffic stream for tourists and visitors to see. They can never know the great urns that are there, or rhodendrons and azaleas.

Throws Coin

I had decided against throwing a coin in the Trevi fountain to insure my return. That is for the romantic young. But then, I reasoned, I should really see how the S. P. Q. R. eventually solves its traffic problem. So I toseed in one tiny piece of money.

Whether or not Nero fiddled as Rome burned, is problematical. He did want a slum-free city that is known. Well, perhaps, some future Nero will rise to clear Rome's eternal streets of today's devastating progress? Or maybe even a mayor LaGuardia, who did it for New York (stop honking and racing motors) will come forth.

In three more hours I collect my grandson from Notre Dame, to begin the trek, plan-net for him, which will eventually lead to home – to Oregon – the unsurpassed in beauty – nowhere.

Arrives Home From Travels

Hornbrook – Mrs. Harry Chapman arrived home Friday from Salem, Ore., where she had spent the past eight days as a guest of Mrs. L. C. Walsh.

On Tuesday, the two women were luncheon guests in Portland of Mrs. Lauran Paine, Ft. Jones, Calif., who was visiting at the home of her son and family, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Paine and son, Mark.

Another day was spent in Corvallis where they visited Mrs. Walsh's niece and her family, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Black and daughter, Bonnie and Laurie. Mr. Black is an instructor at Oregon State university.

Spareribs Are Barbecued in A New Style

What's your favorite way of preparing spareribs? Barbecuing, probably. It's certainly a popular flavor combination.

Although you may have your own recipe for barbecued spareribs, next time try this tangy, new-style Barbecued Rib and Lima Bake. The barbecue sauce is somewhat unique, since it contains orange marmalade for a hint of sweetness.

You can easily cut a side of spareribs into serving size pieces for preparation and serving convenience. (You'll notice that the rib bones are joined by cartilage to the breast bone by cutting through the connecting cartilage with a sharp knife.

Now cut between the ribs making pieces containing 2 or 3 ribs each. The breast bone section should be cut, too. Reba Staggs, home economist, recommends allowing about one-half pound of spareribs per person.

Barbecued Rib and Lima Bake

Three pounds spareribs, cut in serving pieces; one pound dried lima beans; four cups water; one bay leaf; two teaspoons salt; two cans (8 ounces each) tomato sauce; one cup chopped onion; one-third cup orange marmalade; one teaspoon salt; one tablespoon prepared mustard; one tablespoon vinegar; one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce.

Place spareribs, beans, water, bay leaf and two teaspoons salt in large kettle. Cover tightly and simmer for one hour. Pour off liquid and remove bay leaf.

Place beans and spareribs in a three-quart casserole. Combine tomato sauce, onion, marmalade, one teaspoon salt, mustard, vinegar and Worcestershire sauce. Add to beans and ribs. Cover tightly and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 45 minutes. Remove cover and continue baking 15 minutes or until done. Six to eight servings.

Leave

Talent—Miss Sandra Langley has left for her home in Idaho after visiting with her father, William Langley, and Mrs. Langley. The visitor was accompanied home by Mrs. Langley's daughter, Carla, who will visit relatives in Idaho.

To Coast

Ashland — Mrs. Lawrence Leigh and sons, Douglas and Kent, returned Tuesday to their home at Coos Bay after visiting for the past two with Mrs. Leigh's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Caton, 735 Park street.

Visiting In Hawaii

Ashland – Mrs. Lily Robison and Miss Eleanor Robison, 375 Holly street, are spending two weeks in Hawaii.

Visiting BPWC Members Here for Installation

Business and Professional Women club members from Klamath Falls and Ashland were guests at the Medford club's installation ceremonies and dinner held recently in the Rogue Valley Country club.

Mrs. Vieva Redmond was installed president of the Medford BPWC for her second term. Other officers were Mrs. E. J. Brennan and Mrs. Catherine Caldwell, first and second vice presidents; Mrs. Ruth Boyd, recording secretary; Mrs. Earl B. Bigalow, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Floyd V. Palmer, treasurer; Mrs. Wesley Coleman, auditor.

The board of directors installed were Mrs. Earl M. Miller, Miss Peggyann Hutchinson, Mrs. Clara Mall and Miss Gladys Durrand.

Mrs. F. R. Faulkner, former club president, assisted by Mrs. E. H. Loveness were installing officers.

Miss Laura York, past state president introduced members of the visiting clubs.

Mrs. Gene Brico, state legislative chairman, Klamath Falls, spoke on the equal pay for women bill recently signed by President John F. Kennedy. She explained the current congressional planning for an equal rights for women bill.

Mrs. Redmond addressed the club on the subject of personal dividends membership in the club pays the individual members. She listed them as a small part in world affairs; valuable training in leadership; a better position from which to help younger women entering the business world; training in good public relations; an opportunity to participate with state and national federations in carrying out the federation's objectives.

Mrs. George L. Watson gave the invocation. Miss York, as mistress of ceremonies, narrated a humorous, unrehearsed skit. Participants were Mrs. Redmond, Mrs. Brico, Mrs. Watson, Mrs. Virginia Westbrook, Mrs. Betty Fichtner, Mrs. Catherine Caldwell, Mrs. John D. Shortridge and Mrs. Loveness.

Other guests from Klamath Falls were Mrs. Florence Taylor and Mrs. Louise Mitchell.

Attending from Ashland were Mrs. Virginia Westerfield, Mrs. Grace Flint and Mrs. Jaqueline Lewis.

Former Residents Visit Hornbrook
