On the Air

By ELEANOR WIESE

The extensive TV news coverage of President Kennedy's European trip as we see it here gives little indication of the complex organization overseas which makes such coverage possible.

The American networks have a small army of technicians and reporters traveling with Mr. Kennedy. But the focal point for CBS coverage, for example, is the London Airport where executive producer Don Hewitt has set up the CBS News switching center.

From wherever the President happens to be in West Germany, Ireland, Italy or England, the sound-picture study is fed across micro-wave relay towers and over special lines to Hewitt's position, which has a complex of machines, amplifying equipment and monitors staffed by reporters and editors, for broadcast on the network.

The location of the center has a double advantage. Once the tape or film has been edited and processed for broadcast, Hewitt can either feed a Telstar or Relay satellite pass, or place the tape aboard a jet courier plane en route to New York if a satellite pass is unavailable.

Hewitt reportedly has a better picture at the switching center of President Kennedy's public appearances in Europe than the President's Secret Service guard.

On the CBS monitors, he can watch tight close-ups of the President as he is greeted by officials and the people of the various countries he visits. The powerful zoom lens of the television camera is able to follow Mr. Kennedy into the midst of the crowds with far greater ease than can the Secret Service men, who often seem to be elbowed aside.

SHOW OF THE WEEK, 10 p.m. Sunday KMED-TV. "Opening Night" is a behind-the-scenes study of a stage play in rehearsal. PET TALK

By M. I. L.

HAVE YOUR PET SPAYED
Cruelty to animals begins when you allow the birth of litters of puppies and kittens which you do not want.

Americans stand convicted of cruelty to animals. You may well ask how this is possible when American families own 23 million dogs and 27 million cats. The cruelty comes from the fact that these families permit their pets to breed each year more than 25 million puppies and kittens for which there is no permanent home.

Most of these young animals, unwanted by their owners and passed on to anyone who will take them, are eventually abandoned to a lingering death of starvation, disease and exposure. The public is hardly aware of this suffering because there are not great numbers of homeless cats and dogs at any one time in any one locality.

But as the agony of one homeless animal is stilled by death, another unwanted cat or dog is abandoned to replace it, thereby continuing the endless chain of misery. And the cost is staggering: ever-increasing millions of dollars are spent each year for dog-catching, animal shelters, and gas chambers—yet only a small fraction of the homeless is ever caught.

The plight of the homeless animals is a symbol of human irresponsibility. What can be done about it? You pet should be spayed to avoid producing unwanted litters. Spaying is simple surgery, performed by a veterinarian with pet under anesthesia, which renders female cats and dogs sterile. Contrary to popular myth, spaying does not make an animal fat or lazy and does not affect its personality or physical condition. Almost all "Seeing-Eye" dogs are spayed females.

There is a humane agency called Friends of Animals, Inc., whose goal is a nation without a single "homeless cat or dog." To achieve this goal Friends of Animals, Inc., gives financial help to those who cannot afford prevailing fees for the spaying of mixed-breed cats and dogs.

For information in regard to obtaining this financial assistance call Cat Care Society, Phone 773-2335.

A spayed pet is the best pet.
