

Many Interesting Events Went Unnoticed in Kennedy's Trip

By MERRIMAN SMITH
UPI White House Reporter
Washington - (UPI) - There was so much sweep, motion and speed to President Kennedy's European trip that many interesting human touches went unnoticed in the overpowering news treatment of such major events as his talks with government leaders and a visit to the Berlin wall.

There was the night he spent in Wiesbaden at the General Von Steuben hotel, an ultra-modern establishment operated by the Air Force.

The President was tired when he reached his room and flopped down on a bed. His buddy and personal assistant at the White House, Dave Powers, went to the window and saw several stories below on a street a crowd of several thousand persons. They were chanting the President's name over and over again, trying to get him to come to the window for a wave.

Wearily, the President told Powers to serve as his stand in and wave for him, which Powers did. There was a mighty roar of applause from the street below.

"I don't know whether I like that after all," Kennedy said to his pal of many years. "It shows anybody can get a cheer."

Another sidelight: Several of the major British newspapers cannot understand the difference between the Secret Service and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Just as it was when former President Dwight D. Eisenhower visited England and Scotland in 1959, the papers in London carried cartoons about the Kennedy visit and his protectors invariably bore the label F.B.I.

One British newspaper last Sunday reported excitedly that half of the Secret Service agents assigned to protect the President were left handed. This paper's reasoning was that since agents rode on the left and right sides of the security car following the Chief Executive that half of them had to be left handed.

Requirement for All

What this journal did not know was that the Secret Service requires its agents - in fact all agents assigned to White House details - to be

Man Charged With Disorderly Conduct

Central Point - Oliver Harry Tice, 67, of 427 1/2 East Pine st., was charged with disorderly conduct and lodged in the county jail after Central Point police found him unconscious on the floor of his home early this morning. The house was on fire.

Police Officers William Russell and Robert Howe happened to drive by at 1:15 a.m. and spotted flames through a window. Russell found Tice and pulled him to safety while Howe called firemen.

Don Milligan, assistant Central Point fire chief, said the fire may have been caused by a cigarette left in a chair or in a trash sack near the chair. The floor was charred underneath the chair. A magazine otherwise was minor.

Temperatures Skid In Upper Midwest

By United Press International
A welcome cold front sent temperatures skidding in the upper Midwest today and punched violent thunderstorms eastward through the Ohio valley.

By the end of the day, a searing nine-day heat wave will be broken from the Mississippi to the Atlantic.

The mercury dipped to 46 degrees early today at Duluth, Minn., and into the 60s as far south as Atlanta, Ga.

The desert Southwest maintained the highest temperatures in the nation, with Blythe, Calif., reporting 95 degrees during the night.

Thunderstorms still swept the Ohio valley today, and more were on tap through the lower Mississippi valley.

Severe storms dumped heavy rains and hail from Kansas to New England Tuesday night and resulted in at least four deaths.

A Bit Complicated

Comedians Register as Lobbyists In Order To Plug Favorite 'Cause'

By DICK WEST
Washington - (UPI) - I stuck my head into the office of House Clerk Ralph Roberts and asked "do you have a couple of comedians in here?"

The place is full of them," the receptionist said. "Which two are you looking for?"

I was looking for Marty Allen and Steve Rossi, who showed up a couple of minutes later and requested information on how to register as lobbyists.

It gets a bit complicated trying to explain why a night club and television comedy team was interested in lobbying. But I'll do the best I can.

It is the practice of big name comedians these days to associate themselves with "causes," usually one that is identified with health.

As to whether this has anything to do with the outbreak of sick jokes I am not prepared to say.

At any rate, Allen and Rossi have reached the upper stratum of clowning owing in part to a boost they got from astronaut Gordon Cooper.

During his recent orbital flight, Cooper paid them the honor of borrowing a line from one of their routines. In case you missed it, it was "hello down dere."

Jackie, Children Begin Vacation

Hyannis Port, Mass. - (UPI) - Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy and her two children began their summer vacation at a rented home on Squaw Island today.

President Kennedy was expected to join his family this week end at the house they have rented from industrialist Louis Thun of Reading, Pa.

So now they have taken the next logical step by linking themselves with a "cause," in this case the Epilepsy Foundation.

They came to the Capitol this week to confer with Sen. Eugene D. McCarthy (D-Minn.) about a bill he has introduced to provide federal assistance for improving methods of educating students with epilepsy.

But first they took the precaution of obtaining lobbying registration forms. All clear? I asked Allen if there was anything else he planned to do while he was in the Capitol.

"Yes," he said. "I want to see Senator Goldwater. I want to return some cuff links I bought at his store."
