Premier Leaves Moscow As Talks With Peking Open

Move Seen As Snub To Chinese

Moscow — (UPI) — Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev, in a seeming rebuff to Peking, was disclosed Saturday to have left Moscow as negotiators from Communist China and Russia met in the first business session of their historic showdown conference.

Khrushchev, who had returned to Moscow only two days ago from a trip to East Germany, was in Kiev. The premier's absence from the city at the time of the vital talks was disclosed by Moscow radio.

Diplomatic circles said they considered Khrushchev's absence a snub because it is customary for the Soviet leader to receive personally all high-ranking foreign Communist delegations. Ping Hsiao-Ping, head of the Chinese delegation, is the No. 2 man in the Chinese Communist party after Mao Tse-Tung.

May Meet Later

It was possible that he would meet later with the Chinese.

There was no explanation of Khrushchev's seemingly pointed absence from the Soviet capital during the talks, but there was little doubt about the obvious indirect rebuke to the Communist Chinese delivered by publication Saturday of a new peace appeal from President Kennedy.

The Soviet news agency Tass revealed Kennedy's appeal of Friday as the Soviet and Chinese Communist ideological experts met in the grey stone headquarters of the Communist party central committee. The publication was seen as another rebuff to the Communist Chinese who have rejected Khrushchev's policy of "peaceful coexistence" with the West.

The message from Kennedy to Khrushchev thanked the Soviet premier for his July 4 offering of good wishes and urged a joint effort to solve "key problems which divide us."

The government newspaper Izvestia printed the text of the Kennedy message Saturday night but noticeably failed even to mention the Sino-Soviet meeting.

Reliable informants said the two negotiating delegations confined their secret session Saturday to a presentation of "position papers."

Traffic Toll Nears 400 Mark

By United Press International

The Independence holiday traffic toll topped the 350 mark Saturday and a National Safety Council spokesman said it now appeared the total for the 102-hour holiday would exceed the 1961 record.

During the first half of the holiday the death pace was running well below that of the four-day 1961 July 4 holiday period.

A 12:30 a.m. (edt) tabulation by United Press International showed at least 383 persons died in traffic accidents during the holiday. The breakdown:

Traffic, 383; drownings, 128; boating, 3; planes, 2; fireworks, 1; miscellaneous, 67; total, 584.

NEWS BRIEFS

ITEMS FROM AROUND THE GLOBE

BRITISH GUIANA STRIKE SETTLED
Georgetown, British Guiana — (UPI) — A settlement was reached Saturday to end the 11-week general strike against Marxist Premier Cheddi Jagan's government. Robert Wilks, mediator from the British Trades Union Congress, said terms were signed today and work will resume Monday.

BRITISH OFFICE DEFECTION REPORTED
Berlin — (UPI) — The official East German news agency Saturday said a British army corporal had defected to East Germany and his description matched that of a missing intelligence Corps agent. The ADN Communist agency said that a British Army corporal identified as Brian Patchett had defected to East Germany and asked for political asylum.

LAOS NEUTRALISTS STOP RED DRIVE
Vientiane, Laos — (UPI) — Communist Pathet Lao troops staged a daring daylight attack behind the Neutralist lines yesterday, but the Neutralists drove them back. It was announced Saturday.

OIL PIPELINE BLOWN UP AGAIN
Caracas, Venezuela — (UPI) — Castro-Communist extremists Saturday blew up the Mene Grande oil company pipeline for the fourth time in recent months. The dynamiting took place near the eastern oil town of El Tigre, 333 miles southeast of Caracas. It was followed by a fire.

Illia, is one of the favorites. Former Argentine dictator Juan Peron, in exile in Spain, said Friday in Madrid that the election, in which some Peronist electors were disqualified by the government, were a "big farce." He predicted that the "masses" would resort to insurrection. (UPI)

Farm Labor Office To Be Set Up On Fairgrounds

The farm labor office trailer will be established on the county fairgrounds near the armory again this year, it was agreed this week following a meeting with representatives of city, county and farm industry.

"We certainly are not going to stick our heads in the sand and build a fence around Parco d'Alba to keep out all migratory labor," Medford Parks and Recreation Director Robert L. Haworth said Saturday. "But, the city officials do think that the fair industry, county and city should meet this fall to discuss development of an area which migratory labor could use for overnight camping."

The two representatives of the local pear industry, Don Root and Dunbar Carpenter, agreed that migratory labor should not be allowed to camp in Parco d'Alba.

Extra Cost
Haworth noted use by laborers tends to drive out all picnickers, and cost the city $850 in extra operational expenses during a six week period due to broken fixtures in the restrooms.

It also hinders the early morning irrigation of the park, he explained. The city realizes, however, the importance of the pear industry to the local economy and is willing to compromise, he added.

Two alternatives suggested are locating the office in the old secretary of state's office on the South Pacific highway across from the Roxy Ann bowling alley, or migratory labor camping in the open space between the armory and the ball park.

The multiple use concept could be carried out by allowing migratory labor to use the proposed baseball park dressing rooms when not in use for athletic events.

Troops, Police Deployed As Argentines Go To Polls

Buenos Aires — (UPI) — The armed forces Saturday deployed 70,000 troops and thousands of federal police throughout Argentina to try to avert violence in today's presidential elections boycotted by the followers of ex-dictator Juan D. Peron.

Tough security orders were to "repress with all energy" possible disturbances by Peronists angered by the military government's rejection early Saturday of their demands for a seven-day postponement of the elections.

The elections were called to try to restore stability to a nation which has witnessed successive revolts, cabinet crises and high unemployment since President Arturo Frondizi was deposed by the military 15 months ago. Chances are they will not.

Fill Numerous Posts
The elections are to fill 21,173 elective posts ranging from president to local aldermen, including 192 federal deputies, 22 governors and 46 federal senators. Elections in 1962 were cancelled by the military because of sweeping Peronist victories.

The Peronist boycott left three major presidential candidates but none is considered likely to win enough votes today to gain an absolute majority in the Argentine electoral college July 31. If they do not, new elections will be necessary later. The armed forces pledged to head the results of these elections.

Of the nine presidential candidates, the three major contenders are retired Lt. Gen. Pedro E. Aramburu, former provisional president and nominee of the Unity party; Arturo Illia of the People's Radicals and Oscar Alende of the radical Intransigents.

Horacio Suello of the Christian Democrats, who briefly yielded top place on his ticket to a Peronist, had a possibility of picking up large numbers of stray Peronist votes by those not heeding the party boycott call.

A complex new proportional representation plan was openly designed to prevent Peronists from gaining majority control was in effect for the balloting. The Peronists control possibly 35 per cent of the popular vote.

These precautions and the security measures stem from the fact that Peron, from his exile in Madrid, still wields considerable influence over the working class to whom he left a mixed legacy of labor advances and harsh totalitarianism.

Labor Market Is Flooded, Except In Skilled Jobs

The local labor market has been flooded with applications except in the more skilled occupations, John J. Patton, manager of the Medford office of State Employment service, reported Saturday.

The end of school was followed by an army of student job seekers marching on the employment agency asking for summer work. There are also many people moving into the county or inquiring about job opportunities here, Patton said.

There is less summer work for students this year than a year ago, largely due to the lack of thinning in the orchards, the manager of the employment office noted. This reduction of work in the orchards resulted from the unfavorable weather experienced when the fruit trees were in bloom.

The labor dispute in the lumber industry also was mentioned by Patton as a reason for more men coming here from other parts of the state. The strike has not affected the local mills.

Unemployment has been about one per cent higher than it was in the Rogue River valley one year ago, but, except for fruit work, the overall employment situation appears to be generally good for the summer months, Patton stated.

Migration from out of state continues to be heavy, according to the employment report. These people, Patton explained, are not itinerant workers, but individuals looking for new locations away from large centers of population. Relatively few of these people are able to find employment and remain in this area at the present time.

Construction of a natural gas pipeline into this area was mentioned by Patton as an encouraging development for labor forces. Many industries cannot operate without such a source of fuel, he explained. The availability of natural gas should have an important effect on future developments in this area.

Discovery Of Body, Debris Dims Chances For Lost Ship

Miami — (UPI) — The Coast Guard said Saturday night a body has been found by the U. S. aircraft carrier Wasp in the area of the Caribbean where the fishing ship Sno' Boy has been missing for five days with 40 persons aboard.

The Coast Guard said it has no identification on the body but "it was found floating in the same general area as debris" from the missing ship.

Earlier in the afternoon, a deck house, life jacket and a white spar, believed to be from the missing ship, were spotted by one of at least 10 Navy and Coast Guard planes in the search.

The debris and the body were found about 50 miles south of Jamaica.

Missing Since Tuesday
The Sno' Boy has been missing on a fishing trip from Kingston, Jamaica, to a small island 80 miles to the southwest since Tuesday.

Still earlier Tuesday, bamboo poles — part of the ship's cargo — were found by a fishing vessel, dimming hopes of finding the Sno' Boy intact.

A fishing vessel Friday picked up a plywood dining table from the ship.

The Coast Guard said the white spar appeared to be part of the missing ship's mast. The hull of the Sno' Boy is also white.

The search for the Sno' Boy was intensified Saturday after the harbor master at Kingston definitely identified the table as part of the Sno' Boy. The table was found by a boat identified as the Maristuta.

A number of planes from the aircraft carrier Wasp and from Guantanamo Naval Base, Cuba, were sent up to aid Coast Guard vessels in looking for the missing boat. It left Kingston Monday night for Northeast Cay, a tiny island 80 miles from Jamaica.

The Coast Guard said the spot where the table and bamboo pieces were found was "not far from Kingston."

Previous reports had said 55 persons were aboard, but the Coast Guard in Miami, headquarters of the search effort, said Saturday it had verified that there were only 40. The earlier reports said two crewmen were Americans and the others aboard were Jamaicans.

The Coast Guard said it was not "speculating" on the fate of the boat. "We have not established whether she is afloat or has gone down," a spokesman said.

However, discovery of the debris obviously darkened chances that the boat survived storms in that area the middle of the week.

Glenn Rumored As Candidate For U.S. Senate

Columbus, Ohio — (UPI) — Astronaut John H. Glenn may run from the space program to race as a Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate from his native Ohio next year, informed Democratic sources said Saturday.

The plan to put Glenn into the race was seen as a move to strengthen President Kennedy's hand in Ohio, which he lost in 1960, and to give the party a strong candidate against the Republican nominee expected to be U. S. Rep. Robert Taft Jr.

Informed sources said the plan depends in part upon whether Democratic Sen. Stephen M. Young, a surprise winner in 1958, decides to run for reelection.

Party leaders would be reluctant to put a candidate into the field against Young, who is in his 70s. Young has kept silent about his plans although he indicated regularly until recently that he would not seek reelection.

Word that Democratic national party leaders were quietly checking in Ohio on Glenn's eligibility as a candidate caught leaders of both parties by surprise. The Marine colonel's civilian address is New Concord, Ohio.

Democratic State Chairman William L. Coleman and former Gov. Michael V. Di Salle, a recent dinner guest at the White House, said the reports were news to them. Republican State Chairman Ray C. Bliss, who has masterminded some major GOP victories, said he had heard nothing of any move to put Glenn into the race.

But Ohio Democrats had been looking for a candidate, assuming that Young, in his 70s, would not run again. They admitted they had nobody other than Young with a statewide following. Obviously if the famed astronaut could be persuaded to run they would have a ready-made candidate, who is world famous and an eloquent public speaker.

There was no word from Glenn but reports have filtered out from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) in Texas that Glenn might soon put aside his actual space work to become a public relations man for the agency.

FESTIVAL TO OPEN

Moscow — (UPI) — The third international Moscow film festival opens today with a galaxy of Western movie stars in attendance — and the Communist Chinese conspicuously absent.

CRITICAL OF OWN RACE — James Meredith, right, the Negro who integrated the University of Mississippi and became a hero to his race, charged at the NAACP convention in Chicago Saturday that what he called "intolerance and bigotry" among his own people may endanger the civil rights movement. With him in this Friday photo are Charles Evers, left, brother of Medgar Evers, NAACP field worker who was slain in Jackson, Miss., recently, and U. S. District Court Judge James Parsons. (UPI)

Meredith Criticizes Negro Leaders For 'Intolerance'

Chicago — (UPI) — James H. Meredith, the Negro of "Ole Miss" who was a hero to his race only a year ago, charged Saturday that "intolerance and bigotry" among the leaders of his own people may doom the civil rights movement.

Meredith's bitter blast, delivered in an exclusive interview at the convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), was the latest and most dramatic development in a widening rift between the nation's civil rights groups.

Rift Developing
The rift is between the Negro "moderates" who favor the traditional NAACP tactics of courtroom campaigns for civil rights and the new "direct actionists" who fight for their case in mass demonstrations and street rallies.

The NAACP, in a stormy weeklong convention which ended Saturday, took a long step towards joining the ranks of the "direct actionists."

Meredith spoke out after he was subjected to a tongue-lashing before an NAACP youth group last night. He was attacked for being a "moderate," for using the phrase "burr heads," and for opposing the NAACP's planned mass march on Washington next month.

Wilkins Angry
Wilkins also expressed anger at Meredith's speech before the youth group Friday night in which he said:

"Anyone of you burr heads out there could be the owner or manager of a large department store, president of a corporation, or even mayor of the city of Chicago. Only believe, all things are possible if you only believe."

Before Meredith spoke Friday, hundreds of NAACP delegates walked out on a Detroit civil rights leader who had criticized his local NAACP chapter of "dragging its feet."

While the NAACP leaders argued amongst themselves, racial tensions continued elsewhere in the nation. Highlights included:

—The school board of Virginia's Albemarle county was fired by the county board of supervisors for refusing to back down on an order banning all integrated extra-curricular school activities.

—The Detroit NAACP branch staged its third "freedom march" through an all-white neighborhood in the city's Grand River-Seven Mile area.

Boycott Slated
—A Negro boycott of white merchants was scheduled at Savannah, Ga.

—North Carolina's Gov. Terry Sanford urged a statewide "summit" meeting of 300 mayors, city managers and civic representatives "to display wisdom and courage and to understand that every child of God on earth desires a chance for life and human dignity."

Sanford added, "I don't intend to dance to the tune of extremists on either side."

U.S., Haiti Engage In Comedy Of Errors Over Ambassador Thurston's Furniture

Washington — (UPI) — The United States and Haiti have been playing out a comedy of errors over the U. S. ambassador's furniture — except that for the ambassador it's not at all comical.

It all started June 14 when the Haitian government announced that U. S. Ambassador Raymond H. Thurston was no longer welcome there. Thurston was in Washington on consultations at the time. He was declared unwelcome after a long period of turmoil between the U. S. and Haiti.

'Only' or 'Even?'
The State department said the Haitian government's note stipulated that Thurston could return "only" for a brief period to pick up his belongings. The department announced that he would do so.

But it turned out that, somehow, the U. S. government had incorrectly translated the note. It actually said Thurston could not return "even" to pick up his belongings.

The State department's announcement of Thurston's plans so angered the Haitians that they fired off a new note saying he positively could not return. The trouble was that virtually all the ambassador's furniture and his wife's possessions were still in their home in Port-au-Prince.

Also, the furniture was intermingled with other people's furniture since the Thurstons had rented their quarters partially furnished. Someone would have to sort it out.

The State department conceived a plan to seek permission for Mrs. Thurston to make a quick trip to Haiti. While negotiating with the Haitian government for this, the department swore newsmen to secrecy. But suddenly a new situation arose. Haitian Ambassador Dr. Louis Mars was in Port-au-Prince and wanted to go to Europe.

The U. S. had declared him "persona non grata" in retaliation the same day Thurston was declared unwelcome. Haiti asked the State department if Mars could transit the United States on his old U. S. visa issued to him as a diplomat. The State department was about to reply when it learned that Mars was already changing planes at New York's Idlewild airport. It had him paged at the airport in an effort to stop him, but no one answered the page, and Mars was soon in the air over the Atlantic.

Then, last week, the Haitian government formally notified Washington it would not let Mrs. Thurston enter the country. It said this was because of the trouble the U. S. had tried to make for Mars.

As matters stood Saturday, someone in the U. S. embassy in Haiti will have to try to sort out the Thurston's furniture and ship it here.
