Cool Air Clings To East Coast; South, West Bake

By United Press International - Cool air clung to the East today and heat kept the temperatures in the South and West at high levels.

Temperatures from the Middle Atlantic states through Tennessee into Arkansas were 10 to 15 degrees lower this morning than Tuesday morning.

Readings in the 50s also prevailed from the Great Lakes region to the North Atlantic states. The temperatures fell to 54 in New York Tuesday, the coolest July 9 ever recorded. The 46 at Windsor Locks, Conn., was a 54-year low for the date.

The mercury tumbled to 33 at both Bradford and Emporium, Pa.

Winds clocked at 60 to 70 miles per hour accompanied by heavy rains blew a tree onto a house near Winterville, Ga. The storm dumped 3.80 inches of rain on Charleston, S.C., in 24 hours.

The warm 80s and 90s covered the nation from the southern plains to the far Southwest early today. Blythe, Calif., had a reading of 96 during the early morning hours.

The temperature shot to 106 at Imperial, Calif., 105 at Presidio, Tex., and 101 at Las Vegas, Nev., Tuesday. It was in the 90s in such places as Amarillo, Tex., Little Rock, Ark., Miami Beach, Fla., Oklahoma City, Okla., North Platte, Neb., Shreveport, La., Wichita, Kan., and Salt Lake City, Utah.
