

Listened to Wrong Tunes But Got An 'A' in Music

By JOSEPH FLEMING
 Berlin—(AP)—Joern Lehmann, 16-year-old member of the Communist Youth Organization, got an "A" in music but he is failing civics because he listened to the wrong tunes.

Lehmann turned on his transistor radio in the schoolyard at recess. As a result, he was threatened with expulsion from East Berlin's Rahnsdorf High school and he got his photograph in the newspaper.

Joern lists his hobby as music and it was a music program that got him in trouble, cast doubt on the political reliability of his friends and even of the school branch of the "Free German Youth."

If it had been just music Joern played during recess, he would have been okay. But he played "NATO music."

No Such Thing

Now there really is no such thing as "NATO music." Joern's radio did not play a song called the "NATO March" or anything like that. What he did was tune in to a Western radio station's music program. And Western music is "NATO music," the Communist Youth newspaper Young World said in a story about Joern.

Whether the program is music or cooking hints, East Germans are not supposed to listen to Western stations. The Communists fear news and political programs might be heard, too.

Young World reported Joern did not err through ignorance.

"The revanchist role of the NATO stations had been discussed in class" the newspaper said.

School principal Eriker, who warned Joern that one more Western station would mean expulsion, said Joern and other students had been given adequate instruction on the dangers of listening to Western stations in civics class.

Not only Joern but many of his classmates were in disgrace. They stood around Joern and listened to the music without taking action, the newspaper said.

"I am disappointed with the Communist youths in the class," said Eriker. "In the civics class they give the right answers but outside they let things take their course."

The incident would appear to be minor and hardly worth the space Young World devoted to it, three-quarters of a page in an eight-page tabloid.

But the Communists know that Joern and his classmates are not exceptions. Youth still has not been won over, despite 17 years of Communist rule.

In school youths pay lip service to Communist ideas to get passing marks and keep out of trouble. But Eriker said, outside they do as they please.

Peace Corps Test Slated July 20

A Peace Corps placement test for those interested in becoming a Peace Corps volunteer will be given at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, July 20.

The test in Medford will be administered in the main post office building, and in Grants Pass, Room 3 of the Federal building.

Those selected for training will spend 10 to 12 weeks on a college campus or at a Peace Corps camp in Puerto Rico, studying the language, history and culture of their host country, and American affairs.

Volunteers agree to serve two years in the Peace Corps, including training time. The minimum age for volunteer service is 18. There is no upper age limit, and a number of persons in their seventies are among the 5,000 volunteers now serving.

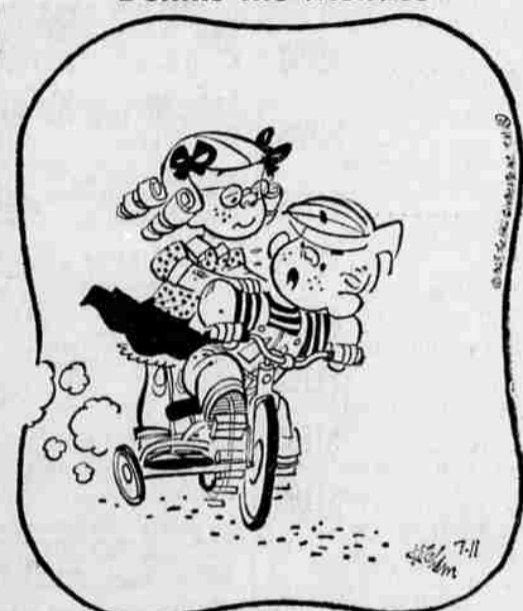

Married couples may serve if they have no dependents and if both husband and wife qualify for the same project.

Liberal arts graduates and persons with skills in agriculture, public health, forestry, carpentry and other building skills, and social work, are being sought in particular. A college degree is not required.

Publication Tells Story of Lumber Industry in Area

A new publication relating the story of the lumber industry of Jackson county has been released by the Southern Oregon Conservation and Tree Farm association.

Dale Prentice, SOCTFA secretary-manager, noted that the pamphlet was produced at the request of the SOCTFA public relations committee to answer the most often asked questions concerning the local forest products industry.

The publication outlines the early history of the logging industry in southern Oregon, includes a thumbnail sketch and narrative of typical present-day timber harvesting and contains brief facts and figures on the economic impact of the forest products industry in Jackson county.

Information was compiled from a variety of industry sources by Russ Jamison, Medford, who also designed and produced the pamphlet for SOCTFA, Prentice noted. It will be made available to anyone on request.

Groups or individuals who have need of such a publication to aid them in explaining the forest products industry to employees, local residents or to out of state visitors may secure free copies. Requests should be addressed to Don Stathos, chairman, SOCTFA public relations committee or to SOCTFA, 518 East Main st., Medford. Copies also will be made available at the Medford and Ashland Chamber of Commerce offices, Prentice added.

Present plans call for the publication of a similar pamphlet on the story of the forest products industry in Josephine county at a later date if the present one serves a good purpose in answering questions concerning the industry.
